SILENCE BROKEN BY LITVINOFF

Envoy Says Russo-U.S. Relations Can Be Reestablished in Half Hour.

DECLINES TO SAY MORE

Pleased at Cordial American Press Reception But Refuses Other Information.

By The Associated Press

BERLIN Oct. 28—Russo-American relations can be reestablished within a half-hour, so far as Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, is concerned

Deluged with requests of American correspondents to receive them, Litvinoff broke his self-imposed pledge not to talk enroute to Washington for discussions with President Roosevelt.

He met them at the Soviet embassy a few hours after his arrival by train from Warsaw

Shaking hands all around and beaming his accustomed smile, Litvinoff said "I know you expect me to say something, but that's impossible at present.

"Naturally, I am tremendously pleased at the cordial manner in which the American press of all shades greets the impending conference with Mr Roosevelt and I hope this goodwill continues."

He parried every attempt to elicit the secret of when he will depart from Berlin or what ship he will take for the United States, saying he did not know.

Movements Are Mystery

"There's much apparent mystery about my movements," he went on a moment later.

"I'll tell you why I don't say what ship I am taking. That would naturally lead to yourselves or your colleagues taking passage on the same boat.

"Their mission naturally would be to get me to talk, but as I can't

LINDBERGHS PURSUE HOBBIES IN PARIS

Colonel Up in Acrobatic Plane While Anne Goes Window Shopping.

By The Associated Press

PARIS, Oct. 28—Colonel and Mrs Charles A. Lindbergh pursued their hobbies here today

The colonel went up in Michael De Troyat's acrobatic plane at Villacoublay, showing his skill and studying aviation technique, while Mrs Lindbergh went window shopping.

The colonel did not try all of De Troyat's stunts which make him an acrobatic champion, but he gave what other pilots called a "superb exhibition."

Meanwhile, his wife saw the streets of Paris at close range after surprising bystanders in her hotel with an easy, rapid flow of excellent French in a lobby conversation with an engineer who called to see the colonel.

Then alone she wandered out for an hour and a half.

QUICK ACTING AUTOIST SAVES R.R. WATCHMAN

Crestline Crossing Guard Snatched from Pathway of Switch Locomotive.

STRUCK BY HIT SKIP CAR

Following Motorist Risks Life To Drag Victim from Tracks.

Special to The Star

CRESTLINE O Oct 28 Like a scene from a moving picture thriller was the rescue of Frea Delgreco, crossing watchman as he lay in the path of an approaching switch engine last night at 8 30 at the Big Four crossing here

The watchman who is about 45 years of age, was knocked down by a car whose driver failed to heed his warning light Without stopping, the driver went on and the man was left on the tracks

W. Hinkle of Galion, driver of a car following the hit-skip motorist, saw the car strike the man, saw the man fall, and saw the lights of a switch engine slowly bearing down on the stunned man who was unable to drag himself out of the way.

As the engine approached to within a few feet of the crossing, Mr. Hinkle drove his car on the tracks, opened the door and snatched the man from the tracks into the car just as the engine hit the rear of the automobile. The engineer, aware of an unusual commotion at the crossing, had slowed the engine down and was able to stop almost instantly

Floyd Rackenbaugh of Richland county was arrested last night by the Mansfield sheriff and held as the driver of the car which struck Delgreco. Mr Rackenbaugh and several occupants of the car denied that they knew they had struck the man, authorities said. Mr Rackenbaugh was to be given a hearing here this afternoon.

The watchman is in Emergency hospital here, suffering a compound fracture of the left leg and bruises and cuts about his body. His condition is not regarded as serious He has a wife and two children in Italy.

FIRST FARM STRIKE FATALITY REPORTED

Picketer Slain in Wisconsin; Other Outbreaks Continue.

By The Associated Press

A Dane county, Wisconsin farmer picketing a highway near Madison for the cause of farm relief, became the first fatality of the current strike for cost of production.

The victim, Gundar Felland, was shot down last night by one of two men, who were occupants of an automobile apparently acting as a convoy for a truck Three brothers, one from Madison and two from Marshfield, were detained for questioning

At Marshfield, Wis., physicians held little hope for the recovery of Theodore Weber 29, who was beaten by pickets when he sought to drive a truck load of fence posts through a picket line

From other parts of the state came reports of minor clashes resulting in injuries to a dozen or so persons.

Creameries and other milk plants continued to close, some voluntarily and some under pressure of strikers and sympathizers.

At Council Bluffs, Iowa, an agreement was reached between representatives of the farm holiday movement and the southwestern Iowa Truckers' association for a cessation of attempts by pickets to stop livestock trucks.

Shower of Meteors May Be Visible in Mid-November

Ohio Wesleyan Astronomer Says Clear Skies Will Be Necessary To Obtain View.

DELAWARE, O., Oct. 28—If skies are clear on the nights of Nov. 15 to 18, one may see a number if meteors shoot through space, it was revealed at Perkins observatory of Ohio Wesleyan university here by Dr. N. T. Bobrovnikoff, assistant professor of astrophysics.

Dr. Bobrovnikoff made this statement Friday night at the monthly guest night progress of the observatory.

"Every year during the middle of November there have been meteor showers, and the celestial show is all likelihood will be repeated this year," Dr. Bobrovnikoff told the university guests.

Meteor showers [illegible] from one small [illegible] streaked in [illegible] Leo, the Lion. This part of the heavens is called the radiant of the showers, and the meteors are named Leonids.

Johnson Threat To Prosecute Ford Signalizes Start of New Policy.

APPROVED BY PRESIDENT

Detroit Motor Magnate Quick To Assail New Attitude of Blue Eagle.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Oct 28 A stern decision to prosecute conspicuous violators appears to have supplanted NRA's long exercised care to shelter its industrial program from court attack

From the signing of the industrial law until now, Hugh S Johnson has picked a course calculated to lead around the pitfalls of legal action Attempts at vigorous enforcement have been mild, with a clearly indicated policy that an easy attitude would bring more results in the first objective of getting American industry and trade under codes

But yesterday a outright promise of prosecution if not when Henry Ford should be found to be violating the automobile code, signalled a new readiness to face a constitutional test of the industrial law. This determination, coupled with a rigorous exclusion of Ford from government contracts was backed by President Roosevelt It was also accompanied by a statement from Johnson in regard to another code "That's all right we are not afraid of anybody taking anything to court"

F. D. R. Impatient

Close observers saw two essential factors underlying the new attitude. NRA had "snatched" the Blue Eagle to use the current NRA slang from a roadhouse meat market, a little shop headed for bankruptcy and a beauty parlor Johnson was disturbed at this haul of small fry He is known to feel that after all the promises that chiselers would be disciplined, he could not face the public so long as any big and conspicuous firm or group challenged the new order. This feeling applies to Ford

Even more important has been a mounting impatience at the White House with the laxity of control in the industrial program.

President Roosevelt's determination that, barring interference by the comptroller general, the government would not buy products from Ford or any other manufacturer, not under NIRA, was viewed as scaling the administration's attitude on discipline.

Johnson said the same, adding that Ford "has publicly stated that he was not in sympathy with the code and would never put into effect anything that looked toward collective bargaining"

The Ford Motor Co promptly replied it "observes the law and exceeds it in all its real recovery features," when Johnson told the press he would turn a "clear-cut viola-

Managing Money: A New Job For The New Deal

NO. 2—FLEXIBILITY IN THE DOLLAR'S GOLD CONTENT

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of four articles concerning the administration's new monetary policies in relation to commodity prices and the recovery program.)

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Theories of currency control as advocated by Prof. G. F. Warren apparent have been played an important party in creating the new government monetary policy.

The Cornell university professor who is a member of the Roosevelt brain trust proposed the theories as a stabilization factor.

Under the Roosevelt plan, stabilization is sought in one phase through the fixing of the price of gold in domestic markets.

Aim At Price Stability.

Professor Warren has pointed to a proposal for a managed currency to be controlled by central banks in such a way as to keep the average of commodity prices stable.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation under the Roosevelt plan, could be compared to a control bank which manages the currency through gold price establishment.

Professor Warren's compensated dollar plan was a proposal to establish by law a currency redeemable in gold, but the weight of the gold for which the dollar would exchange would vary with the index number of wholesale prices of all commodities.

Compensation Planned.

As he explained it, if prices rose 1 per cent, the weight of gold for which the dollar would exchange would rise 1 per cent, and the same in reverse would follow.

"This would keep the dollar stable in buying power for the average of all commodities," he said.

The dollar has to be rubber, he contended, either as to weight or as to value; it cannot have a fixed weight and also have a fixed value.

"This proposal would give it a fixed value and a rubber weight. A scientific money is one with a constant buying power for all commodities rather than a fixed weight of one commodity," he said.

Fixing The Gold Price.

Under the Roosevelt plan the dollar price of gold will be fixed from time to time by the Reconstruction Finance corporation after consultation with the President and the secretary of the treasury.

In effect this would mean the dollar weight in relation to gold will be changed as conditions in domestic markets warrant.

Warren Favors Plan.

Professor Warren said: "Our whole tax and debt structure rests on commodity prices. If this structure is to be kept sound either for the creditor or the debtor it is commodity prices that need to be kept stable, not the weight of gold for which a dollar will exchange."

He viewed price stabilization as a mass action. "Stabilizing the commodity price level does not mean that any single commodity will be free from fluctuations in price due to the supply of it or the demand for it," he said.

"It does mean that commodity prices as a whole may be freed from being swept up or down as a mass due either to world supply of gold or frantic changes in the demands for it."

The managed dollar as seen by Prof. G. F. Warren of Cornell university (above) might be likened to an "elevator" or conveyor to lift commodity prices.

SATURDAY'S MILLIONS GOOD FOOTBALL PICTURE

The hero's team doesn't win the big homecoming game in Saturday Millions—the picture which the Harding High school band is sponsoring at the Palace today. Robert Young as the greatest football star of the day, looks on football as a racket and uses it as such. He is so good that he skips training and on the eve of the big game is out to a night club. In a fight his right hand is badly injured. He goes into the game bandaged and fights but the team loses with the girl he loves, Lolla Parker, his father Grant Mitchell and the girl's father looking on. Young finally learns that there is such a thing as school spirit and teamwork and loyalty, and though he loses the game, he wins something of tangible value. Andy Devine does a good piece of comedy work. A comedy, newsreel and travel talk are on the program.

BAR PAYS RESPECT TO JOHN WIEDEMANN

Marion County Association Passes Resolution at Meeting Here.

Marion attorneys paused in their work Friday afternoon to pay tribute to the memory of John Wiedemann, assistant city solicitor and one of the youngest members of the association who died Sunday night. The association in a meeting in the common pleas court room adopted unanimously a resolution presented by C. C. Fisher dean of the association.

The resolution follows:

Of all men those who have taken solemn oath to uphold the principles of law should be most sensitive to deprecate such as represent the decree of that court superior to all human tribunals. So we the brothers with John H. Wiedemann of the legal fraternity bow in resignation to the Divine Wisdom which has taken him from us by a decree which seems to us premature.

The best we can do as a plain record of Marion county this expression of our sincere grief for the wife and child in their bereavement. Nothing can soften her sorrow or afford her comfort but the assurance of her husband as a man his distinguished success in his profession during the short term granted. His promise if life had been spared the high esteem of his fellow citizens and his faithful domestic love will all sustain her in her trials and make her brave to face the rest of her life without him and whatever fate may determine just as he would wish her to meet them.

We therefore offer this humble tribute of fraternal respect and affection for our late departed brother.

What Do You Lack?

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. LAWRENCE A. WOOD

Pastor, Trinity Baptist Church.

"One thing thou lackest."

THIS was an unusual young man. Not much was lacking in his life. He was of high moral character, honest, earnest, and had resisted many corrupting influences which assail a young man's life. But he felt that something was lacking, especially in the religious life. He came to Christ for instruction.

The lack of one thing may mean the lack of every thing worth while. A row of ciphers are valueless till preceded by a number. Lacking a number the ciphers lack everything. A well prepared garden lacks everything essential, if it remains without seed. What did this young man lack?

The governing principle of his life was wrong. A man's life must be under some one mastering principle for his life to be completely effective. This one mastering passion may be either [illegible] to self or devotion to [illegible] other selfishness or unselfishness. The young man had [illegible] but he had a [illegible] for himself. The [illegible] necessary to complete [illegible] would remain lacking [illegible] was willing to change [illegible]

[illegible] and when he [illegible] A certain [illegible] that right is [illegible] Christ [illegible] Man by nature [illegible] This young man [illegible] to come [illegible]

The [illegible] today. There [illegible] whether a man is a lover of Christ or not. The question [illegible] Does it center in [illegible] that Christ is the very [illegible] there will be lacking [illegible] thing which [illegible] Christ or [illegible]

EPWORTH LEAGUES TO HOLD MEETING

Conference Planned Sunday Afternoon at Prospect Street M. E. Church.

A Marion County Epworth League planning conference and rally will be held Sunday from 2:30 to 4:30 p. m. at the Prospect street M. E. church.

Rev. R. W. Kauble of Marion, Lima district president of Epworth leagues, will preside. Approximately 1000 young people from the three leagues of Epworth church and the leagues of Wesley, the Prospect Street M. E., Asbury, Morral, Green Camp, Prospect, LaRue, Agosta and Meeker are expected to be present.

Plans for the year's work will be discussed and arrangements will be completed for the annual booth festival which will be held Nov. 11 at the First M. E. church at Kenton.

The meeting will be especially for the league cabinets, but all league members in the county have been invited to attend.

REFORMATION DAY PLANNED AT CHURCH

Emanuel Lutheran Congregation To Observe Festival Sunday.

Members of Emanuel Lutheran church will observe the annual celebration of the Reformation festival with services at the regular church hour of 10:30 a. m. Sunday. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Schlinger will deliver a sermon on the theme, "The Real Jewel of the Reformation, the Doctrine of the Forgiveness of Sins." Special music appropriate to the occasion will be sung by the church choir. Holy communion will be celebrated.

The purpose of the festival will be to commemorate the nailing of Luther's 95 theses to the door of the Castle church at Wittenberg, Germany, on Oct. 31, 1517, which marked the beginning of the reformation and might be called the birthday of the Lutheran church.

REV. PORTER PLANS SERMON SERIES

Rev. S. F. Porter of Emmanuel Baptist church will deliver the first of a series of evangelistic sermons on "The Blood of the Lamb of God," Sunday night at 7:30.

The first sermon will be on "The Blood of the Christ Before the Cross or Siam From the Foundation of the World." Rev. Porter will base the series on texts from the Book of Leviticus.

GOAL NAMED FOR SUNDAY SERVICE

A goal of 325 in Sunday school has been set for rally day service Sunday morning at the Greenwood Evangelical church.

Two special programs, one for the adults in the auditorium and another for the children in the basement, have been planned by those in charge. Rev. Harry G. Deeds pastor, will speak to the adults following the program, on "Fishing in Two Seas."

Daily Guide to Health

BY DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

Enlargement of Thymus Gland.

STATUS LYMPHATICUS is a term used to describe a rare condition. Yet it is frequently encountered in large cities and municipalities devoted to the care of children. Unfortunately the cause of this disturbance has not yet been discovered.

It is a disease that recognizes no distinction. It afflicts children of the rich as well as the poor. It is said to be due to some disturbance of the thymus gland, which is located in the neck just below the thyroid gland.

The thymus gland is a temporary organ and, like normal tonsils, gradually disappears. It attains its largest size at puberty. From then on it begins to shrink and eventually disappears. In a normal infant the gland weighs from six to seven grams.

When a child is afflicted with status lymphaticus, the thymus gland grows rapidly. It is usually five to ten times its normal size. In some cases the gland weighs as much as thirty to forty grams.

Due to this marked increase in size, the child has difficulty in breathing. He is subject to attacks of convulsions and sudden spasms of difficult breathing. Many cases of sudden and unexpected deaths in children have been traced to unsuspected enlarged thymus gland.

A child who has an enlarged thymus gland is liable to succumb to minor accidents and shocks. For example, a simple abrasion or minor operation may lead to a fatal outcome. This is more apt to occur when the disease is not known to exist.

Although the cause of this rare and unusual affliction is not known, it is better understood than in former years. A child who suffers from difficult breathing, or has repeated attacks of fainting and convulsions should be suspected of being a victim of status lymphaticus.

Readily the trouble can be established by a simple X-ray picture. The pictures are taken in several different positions to determine whether the gland is enlarged. If the X-ray picture shows enlargement it is imperative that the child be placed under the personal supervision of the physician.

There is really little hope could be offered to victims of this disease. Within recent years beneficial results have been obtained by the so-called deep therapy, or X-ray treatment.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, Oct. 29.

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE, although forecasting a fairly satisfactory change, removal or journey, may not be considered otherwise propitious. There may be a too arduous pursuit of pleasure, leading to loss of standing as well as to unhappy states of mind or reckless or violent conduct. Moderation is admonished in all things.

Those whose birthday it is may find their year one of disturbance, strife and wayward indulgence, which may react unfavorably on their employment and popularity in business, employment and personal life. A too ardent pursuit of pleasure or society may be at the root of this. Fair change or travel is also presaged.

A child born on this day may be ardent, impetuous and tempestuous in all its relations unless given early training and discipline in self-control. He may lean strongly to the pursuit of pleasure or self-indulgence in all directions.

Notable nativity: John Keats, poet.

• • •

For Monday, Oct. 30.

MONDAY'S ASTROLOGICAL forecast is for a very lively and progressive day in business, especially stimulating all those concerns in which writings, publishing, publicity and promotion are involved. It is an auspicious time for approaching such concerns for renewal of contracts as well as for diligent application to literary pursuits for those so endowed.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a lively and interesting year with much stirring in connection with business as well as intellectual life. Writers and those in publicity, publishing and promotions should prosper.

A child born on this day should be particularly versatile, talented and progressive, succeeding easily in professional lines. It should have a lively and youthful disposition.

Notable nativity: Richard Brinsley Sheridan, dramatist.

CHURCH TO OBSERVE WORLD MISSION DAY

The Woman's Missionary association of the First United Brethren church will observe annual World Missions Day next week with a program Sunday night at 7:30.

Mrs. W. D. Scranton, president of the association, will preside. The program will open with a candle light procession by the choir. Mrs. Scranton will give the call to worship, after which Miss Virginia Fowler will sing. A reading by Miss Mildred Moore will precede a sermon by the pastor, Rev. Carl V. Roop, on "Forward with Christ."

Mrs. Roop will officiate at the presentation of the offering, all of which will go to mission work. A candle recessional by the choir will close the program.

Can't Expect Dog To Waste All His Time for Nothing

A. D. "Dusty" Boyd, city fireman at the central station, has a new dog, a cocker spaniel.

But that's not the story. The fun comes in when his co-workers describe how he lost his other dog.

Dusty had a spell of bad luck, or a hunting instinct, one day and didn't come in at all. The dog, which had faithfully tramped along with him, finally stopped and looked at Dusty. Then, as if disgusted with his hunting ability, he put on the run and hasn't been seen since.

Matt. 19:13-15.

13. Then were there brought unto Him little children, that He should put His hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them.

14. But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

15. And he laid his hands on them and departed thence.

Mark 10:13-16

13. And they brought young children to Him, that He should touch them: and his disciples rebuked those that brought them.

14. But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

15. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein.

16. And He took them up in His arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

Luke 18.15-17

15. And they brought unto Him also infants, that He would touch them: but when His disciples saw it, they rebuked them.

But Jesus called them to Him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

17. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein.

Suffer The Little Children

THESE three gospels Matthew, Mark and Luke relate this story of Christ's love of little children.

In this trip through Perea, Jesus was teaching and healing at every stop. At one place Jesus was surrounded by little children and their parents, who had brought them to see this great Master and Healer, that He might bless them. The disciples were afraid that their Master was too busy to be bothered with so many small children, who were apparently healthy: and scolded the parents for bringing the children to Him, just to receive His blessing.

Jesus was again displeased with His disciples, as He was never too busy or hurried to make a child happy. To further impress upon His listeners, of what the kingdom of heaven would be composed, He said that unless the people had childlike qualities of receptiveness and trustfulness, they would not enter into the kingdom of heaven. In order to receive His blessing it was necessary to be childlike.

This beautiful scene of Christ surrounded by the small children calls forth reflection from everyone.

Sedatives.

A criticism of President Roosevelt's monetary plan voiced by The New York Herald-Tribune declares it is a "shot in the arm," devised to make the farmer feel better for the time being, but which merely serves to add a "fresh element of uncertainty to an already gravely disturbed situation." The President is censured, also, for embarking on the undertaking without "long and careful study and debate and the taking of much expert testimony."

This is a fair treatment of part of the objection to the plan. Unfortunately, when placed in the balance with what is commonly known of the situation, it does not weigh enough to be convincing. It is, to be sure, a "shot in the arm." But because most of the things being tried are of the same nature it can't be condemned on that ground. It is generally conceded that if the patient can be kept under sedatives long enough, his recuperative power will enable him to recover.

One wonders how the President of the United States in a situation like that at present would go about the business of submitting a monetary policy to debate. The process would seem to entail convening congress in special session, and the Herald-Tribune scarcely can claim that the house of representatives and the senate would be in the mood to produce from their deliberations anything more constructive than Mr. Roosevelt's plan, granting as true all the things that are charged against it.

Long chances are the order of the times, chiefly because safe bets disappeared when the economic structure finally collapsed after being out of balance too long. President Roosevelt was elected on the long chance that he might be able to do something. He has done nothing inconsistent with the mandate given him by the majority of a population which registered itself as believing that it was time to quit playing safe according to standards which hadn't held up under strain.

Indelible Impressions.

In a surprise announcement, Albert H. Wiggin, former head of the Chase National bank, has given up the $100,000 retirement pension which was to have marked the bank's annual gratitude for his services. The financier's decision to do this is one of the few voluntary admissions made by individuals under investigation by the senate banking committee that their portions of remuneration in a distressed society may have been a bit out of proportion.

Many have asked themselves, in connection with discussion of the investigations that have revealed so many secrets about the processes of high finance, what will be gained from showing the predatory habits of powerful capitalists. Not infrequently the opinion has been expressed that since there is nothing to be gained but dissatisfaction and loss of confidence, the investigation actually threatens the well-being of the country.

This attitude bespeaks a contentment with the status quo—a contentment which most assuredly does not exist throughout the country. Such things as disclosure that J. P. Morgan, national symbol of money-power, paid no income tax in a year when men with bare subsistence incomes were obliged to pay the tax have done more to restore social balance in the United States than expenditure of a billion dollars in behalf of that large portion of the population which has paid the heaviest penalty for uneven distribution of wealth.

There will be no direct benefit, unfortunately. But it has been demonstrated that those whose abuse of capitalism's privileges has been most flagrant are not invulnerable to the resentment of the great middle current of society. Knowledge that predatory actions can be exposed and punished will do a vast deal to discourage repetition of such action. When an Albert H. Wiggin decides he has no right to a retirement salary of $100,000 a year while other employes of the same institution are receiving barely enough to maintain life, progress is being made. The indelible impression of revealed abuses has been observed with the eyes of good judgment and a reform measure instituted to destroy the impression.

Part of the Fear.

Fear of [illegible] before the [illegible] of appreciation [illegible] pose until [illegible] sleep with [illegible]

They confer [illegible] phrases the [illegible] ance that bank [illegible] country. The [illegible] tion. By [illegible] plainly that [illegible] a terrible thing.

Unfortunately, it is the [illegible] of inflation that is [illegible] itself. Breath spent in [illegible] fits of the process within [illegible] wasted. People want to [illegible] cess is stopped when limits are [illegible] and who will stop it. Lacking [illegible] tory answer, they refuse to [illegible] operation.

The problem was stated clearly [illegible] ago by Edwin Walter Kemmerer, [illegible] on money and practical physician for the money ills of many governments. The great danger is that a highly managed currency will flounder on the rocks of politics, he said. "Prices, wages and debts are affected with such tremendous class interest that when once a currency has broken away from its customary metallic basis the danger is that its controll will cease to be rational or scientific, despite the good intentions of the administrative authorities, and will become a football of politics."

Events have placed the responsibility for preventing mismanagement of managed currency in the hands of the Democratic party in congress and the hands of President Roosevelt in the White House. In the past, the party has been more famed for monetary heresy than good judgment. What it will do in the present remains to be seen. Upon its ability to maintain a reasonable condition of confidence depends directly the party's fate and much of the future of the United States.

Plugging.

From Fort Madison, Ia., scene six years ago this month of a typically American "stunt," comes word of a man who became for a few days back in 1927 a national character. It isn't likely that R. L. Gray will be remembered; six years is a long time.

He was selected and publicized as America's average man. It was the result of an ingenious idea in the head of a magazine writer, who selected Fort Madison as the hypothetical center of the United States and went there to find the average man, on an average street, in an average house, with an average income, intelligence, interests, family and outlook. R. L. Gray was the result.

He was then and is now proprietor of a clothing store. On the brink of 50, he has reached that point where men realize their limitations. He hasn't been a failure by any means, but his dreams of becoming a wealthy man probably ceased to deceive him a good many years ago. It may be assumed that he is content to keep moving along the same line.

R. L. Gray represents, therefore, a modified symbol of the hopes of millions of his countrymen. They, too, don't ask for much. They want security, and that is the hardest thing to get. Even rich men can't be sure they have it. Because this average American represents so much that is truly average, it is interesting to know how he is making out with the depression.

His story is as unexciting and commonplace as his type. While the bombs have been bursting in air and people have been theorizing on the approaching collapse of representative democracy and capitalism, R. L. Gray has been plugging along. "So I studied my field and tried to adjust my business to the needs of the customers. In other words, I tried to sell them the kind of merchandise they wanted at the price they could afford to pay. . . . And by working along this line, and working harder than usual, I think I learned something that'll stand me in good stead when things brighten up all around." Mr. Gray, after six years of oblivion, still is a good sedative.

Last Word.

Simon Michelet, president of the National Get-Out-The-Vote club, has compiled figures on the 1932 election. He is able to report progress in fulfilling the aim of his organization.

Approximately 47,500,000 voters were registered. Returns showed that 41,000,000 of them went to the polls, a better record by a million than was established in 1928 a heavy voting year.

Approximately 62 per cent of all persons eligible to vote turned out, in contrast with 50 per cent in 1920. Women voters, it is estimated, accounted for more than 40 per cent of all votes cast.

The vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt was 22,821,558 and for Herbert Hoover 15,761,841, giving Mr. Roosevelt a plurality of 7,059,017. The Republican plurality in 1928 was 6,423,484.

KELLEY'S ISLAND.

Kelley's Island in Lake Erie got its name from one of its owners, Datus Kelley. But he was a comparatively late owner. The first was a Mr. Cunningham whose name it bore for a time. Two Frenchmen joined him, but all three left the property in the period of the war of 1812. General Harrison placed a guard at the west end of the island to watch the movements of British ships. It was in 1833 that Datus Kelley of Rockport, near Cleveland, and his brother, Irad Kelley of Cleveland, bought the island, and began to use the red cedar and the stone of the island in the markets. Datus Kelley moved his family to the island and there he remained until his death in 1866, developing the island and selling small tracts to settlers.

New York Day By Day

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—I dined with friends at a [illegible] the other evening [illegible] and overstuffed [illegible] Versailles. A [illegible] and Viennese waltzes [illegible] warbled featherly [illegible].

Waiters [illegible] under the watchful eye [illegible] aristocratic [illegible] Banked in deep-cushioned [illegible] against the wall like so many [illegible] in a play, were headline figures of Broadway. Arne Sclwyn, Tommy Manville, [illegible] Sanchez, the Cuban [illegible] and [illegible].

But what interested me chiefly was the [illegible] gossiping about the circus. A fleet of collegiate bar tenders, [illegible] have a ringer for Skeets [illegible] popped their glasses and bottles [illegible] the strains of Serge Flash of the Va[illegible].

[illegible] bank of the old Hoffman House [illegible] turned out. Stout-bottomed [illegible] quickly plied with ab[illegible] with bourbon and frescoed [illegible] with a twist of lemon peel, were [illegible] devoted as in what antiquarian [illegible] proposed to twitter were "the good [illegible]."

[illegible] with a Morris Guest tie [illegible] adored that poetical Hungarian [illegible] Les Six Lepes, two-thirds the wa[illegible] and one-third Moselle, [illegible]. A fat and malicious dam[illegible] to downing her fourth sil[illegible] watched to a more potent [illegible] including a simple-Simon-look[illegible] for striking to innocuous and pal[illegible].

[illegible] but on spindly, high, short-[illegible] were human symbols of the [illegible] sparrows, birds of [illegible] peacock and others of gay [illegible] would, of course, as the carrion [illegible] lurking in the background the sing[illegible] for [illegible] boys and sundry specimens of the [illegible] gentry.

I was [illegible] intrigued—that term has [illegible] I like it with a pert jinkee [illegible] into conversation. "I'm a [illegible] drinkee!" she blurred. Her [illegible] had lost its flounce and [illegible] more askey than the mod[illegible] An overload of the estab[illegible] had given her bartender the eye. She [illegible] more. "How about a sip of your [illegible] acquired. I edged it over. "Dandy. Fair stuff," she exclaimed with a wry [illegible] my lemonade. Then in mocking jest "Go on deacon! Tell me about the pitfalls of our wicked city!" I felt helpless. And rather abused.

Frank Sullivan came in—unconsciously to my [illegible]. I had a chance to hallo across the pyramid of [illegible] centering the bar. One of those "hello, how are you" exchanges that might divert my tormentor. "Who's your friend?" she asked. I explained he was a celebrated up-to-the-minute humorist. So she yelled: "Hey you! Bright-sailor-me—and make it timely. I love puns." Sullivan, wiser than I, retreated.

George Jessel was next to swivel on the horizon. I am fascinated by Jessel's walk, the fast stride of a cat torturously haltered. The lady of the Approaching Hiccups observed: "It wouldn't surprise me to see Frisco wiggle out of the woodwork. Hey, Mr. Ouslay, you in the cute white coat. How about another snort? Virgie is now as sober as Judge Geabury. And Count Sour Puss here is twitching to buy wine." I could stand no more, waved to an imaginary friend and skipped the gutter.

At our table the food was arriving. A huge tureen of petite marmite, held high, while a bristling captain as advance guard cleared an imperious path. Such studied gestures beglamour a meal. European fold-erol, of course, but American cafes are capitalizing it. I think it was Roy Howard who longed for a red-corpuscled spurt of courage to scream to a waiter: "Take it back! It looks terrible!" Just as a bowing captain lifts the lid of the entree for the host to admire. What a glorious way to put a dinner on the blink.

I was not to escape the loose-tongued lady exiting. She was fettering with a stick of lip rouge before an anteroom mirror. "Goo' bye Daddy. You devastating spendthrift you. It's cocktail of the night air," she called. So [illegible] the cloak room girls could hear. [illegible] tittter.

Glancing Backward

TEN YEARS AGO.

It was Sunday, Oct. 28, 1923.

Two hundred and seventy-six alleged members of the Ku Klux Klan and 68 women said to be members of the Kamelia were scheduled for appearance in police court at Portsmouth, O., on a charge of "parading in traffic" following their arrest as they marched in a Ku Klux Klan parade.

Burglaries were reported to police, one at the S. J. Swindles home on Pearl street and the Paul Kennedy home on Hoover avenue and another at the Kroger store on North Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lindsey of Lake were given a surprise party on the occasion of their fifteenth wedding anniversary.

The Marion Athletic association football team closed the season here before a crowd of [illegible] by defeating the Marysville team 20-0. Marion touchdowns were made by Everetts, Irvin and [illegible].

The Xenia Oorang Indian football team was defeated by the Cleveland professional team in Cleveland 27-0. Thorpe did some good punting but his tackling and [illegible] were reported as considerably below [illegible] standard.

Washington And Wall Street

BY GEORGE DURNO

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Certain lads dealing in [illegible] may have been cheered by the fact that no outstanding NRA code cutters have been brought to book despite the President's enforcing regulation.

They won't be [illegible] so chipper in a week or so. Secretary of Interior Ickes, in charge of regulating oil prices and production, is out to step hard on somebody's neck. The oil administrator isn't bothering about the small fry. In fact he even made exceptions in his regulations to give some of them leeway.

But he is after the big fellows with a net.

Hoose Gow

For some days special agents of the interior department have been busy in Texas and other spots in the West gathering evidence. Their orders were to hook a big fish or none at all.

Reports back to Washington indicate the agents have made a tidy show. The evidence is now being sifted to find out which is the most airtight. As soon as that job is completed Ickes plans to give the oil industry a horrible example.

Penalty for violation of Ickes' regulations runs up to $1,000 fine or six months in the bastille.

Pigs

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's scheme of raising up pigs to keep the big bad wolf from the farmers hasn't panned out just the way he hoped.

What Wallace was shooting at was the acquisition of a lot of sows. His idea was to apply birth control ideas to the hog industry with a vengeance and cut down the surplus.

When the secretary's call went out for pigs he got pigs all right—but they were not [illegible]'s.

From all points of the compass came little pigs—[illegible] specimens that proudly were covered only with football makings.

The farmer of the corn belt knows his pigs. He and his father and his fathers father have long looked on pigs as the mortgage lifters. If the government wanted to buy pigs for more than the current market price that was okay with him.

But he didn't let go of the momma sow. Not by a joaful. She's still grunting contentedly out in the pen anticipating another of Mr. Winchell's blessed events.

Emigres

Madame Secretary of Labor Perkins has another problem on her shoulders.

"What to do with all the White Russians who are literally in [illegible] country over we recognize the Soviets"

There are literally thousands of such in the U. S. A. without benefit of passport. They'd have been deported long ago but you can't deport anybody to a country you don't recognize.

Included in this large group are many officers of the Czar's old army. Some of them have found the going so tough they've taken up jobs as doormen or gone to work bathing dishes.

Also there are the princes [illegible] counts, etc., who have been [illegible] ting lightly from the marriage of one wealthy American woman to another. A lot of them came in by the back door and quickly grew their titles after arrival.

They're politely [illegible]. Once we shake hands with President Kalinin they [illegible] nice trip back to the [illegible] where they probably [illegible] thrown to the [illegible].

That is if Mr. [illegible] decides. She [illegible] sian file on [illegible].

The first to [illegible] fact all these [illegible] be reviewed after [illegible] Robe Carl White [illegible] secretary of [illegible] partner. [illegible] statement to [illegible] all the newspapers.

A corps [illegible] service [illegible] White was [illegible] business for [illegible].

[illegible]

Representatives of the committee for the nation, the Farmers' union and other arch-inflationists had a meeting in the office of Senator Thomas of Oklahoma this week. Thomas is their mouthpiece.

One of the proposals put forward by spokesmen for the Farmers' union was nationalization of all credit facilities.

It was argued that the government already is in the banking business up to its neck so why not get wet all over?

The farm agents pointed to the multitudinous R. F. C. operations, the extension of various kinds of crop loans and the government's invasion of rural and urban mortgage fields.

Bearing in mind the pressing burden of debt that hangs over the farming regions they would like to see Uncle Sam set up paying and receiving windows and a loan department and frankly call it a bank.

Favorable rates of interest would be a prime consideration together with liberal credit.

Certain officials of the R. F. C. are speculating privately on how long it will be before the government goes into the investment banking business.

In other words they are wondering if the public treasury is on the verge of underwriting capital expansion wherever the vested powers deem it advisable. This of course would be on long terms.

The short term financing is already very much of an actuality.

Notes.

Inquiries at the White House as to when new District of Columbia commissioners (who jointly act as mayor or governor) will be appointed have become so monotonous most of the out-of-town reporters laugh when they are put ...One local reporter tried to dodge the derision of his colleagues by asking the question of President Roosevelt in French ..He got an answer in kind but the final word was in Spanish—"Manana." —"tomorrow"...When the Soviets' first ambassador comes to Washington he will find a sumptuous embassy awaiting him—relic of the days when Czar Nicholas reigned ..Diplomatic corps men — and women—are wondering what became of its most excellent wine cellar.

BY JAMES M'MULLIN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Local bankers say the government has its tongue in its cheek when it says it isn't interested in running the banks.

There are some nifty jokers in the law authorizing the R. F. C. to purchase preferred stock. Any bank accepting the offer gives the government the right to limit fees and salaries and even to replace officers or directors unsatisfactory in its judgement. And all banks are supposed to accept the offer. Moreover the comptroller of the currency can refuse at discretion to permit the banks to get out of hock to the government (and therefore out of control). "If that isn't control it's a damn good imitation."

The government may not exercise its privileges but what a hidden wallop it packs! The New York banks are exempted from these provisions by special agreement but the principle of the thing has raised a local bumper crop of shudders.

Dividends.

Another form of bank supervision apart from preferred stock—is a definite policy of limiting dividends. Hereafter reserves will get first call on profits and no bonuses allowed. This may hurt stockholders' feelings but it should help prevent a repeat.

Credit.

The New York banks have jacked up their loans on other than security collateral by $136,000,000 in the last three weeks. There's a funny phony about the gain—some little of it went into federal funds or bankers' acceptances. The rest is straight commercial credit.

The banks do fondly hope that Washington is pleased.

Financing.

Government plans are shaping to take over corporate financing if Wall Street declines to function under the securities act. In their present stage they involve a super-bank setup outside the inevitable R. F. C. Henry Pruere is likely to have the problem dumped in his lap in the near future.

The point is that industry's demands for refunding capital must be met as they develop in the next year—or else. This way out will enable the government to take care of industry without giving in to Wall Street.

Planning.

Industrial planning is creeping up on us by degrees. New York approves that General Johnson will not allow new cotton mills to open or old ones to expand production capacity without special permission.

This is one more step on the road to the Cartel system in industry—which even conservatives now admit looks inevitable.

Works.

That $2,000,000,000 allocated to public works sounds better than it is. A large proportion of the contracts involved have not been awarded yet. Local experts insist that not more than half the allotted amount can be spent in the next 12 months.

Sponsors of one public works project claim that no snail ever moved like PWA. They say they could put 80,000 men to work within a few weeks and keep them busy for more than a year. "Our plan was presented six weeks ago and the only answer we got out of the public works crowd is advice to scale it down because it's too big. Is that a way to act when you're supposed to be speeding up employment?"

New housing projects—as apart from slum clearance—have mostly been shelved because they might enrich private capital and start stories of favoritism. But New York authorities say they represent the best prospect of creating a lot of jobs in a hurry. Slum clearance takes months to swing into action after approval because of negotiations for condemning or buying land. With new housing the land problem is solved in advance. Neither Ickes nor his aides are willing to let down the bars because of anxiety to keep black sheep out of the herd. No post-war scandals wanted.

Discretion

One of the things that caused Pecora to issue wholesale subpoenas for members of the New York Stock Exchange was the matter of discretionary accounts. Although he gave no inkling that he had that angle in mind the Exchange authorities sensed an attack on this most vulnerable point. Hence the blank refusal.

If Pecora should air the abuses of discretionary powers on customers' accounts—which will be extremely difficult to prove—more than one respectable Exchange member would be in risk of expulsion. Short limbs will lend a willing hand in bringing out the full story.

Pressure

Despite disclosure high pressure salesmen have not vanished from the scene. Dignified institutions whose "conservative" issues we'll sour are once more sending out well mannered young men to convince investors who have a few bonds left that they ought to make a switch. The "house" makes a quarter of a point each way and the persuader gets his commission.

Arthur Brisbane's News Review : : :

NEW YORK, Oct. 28—Gold went up 22 cents an ounce yesterday, price $31.76 an ounce, and [illegible] Uncle Sam is industriously [illegible] it with his poor, depressed [illegible] dollars for 66 cents an ounce [illegible] than England's price.

First he said. "We don't need gold." Now he is bidding against England to get all he can of it. Some wise plan must be back of it, as the clergyman always says of a bereaved family, but it puzzles many.

The French stock exchange is worried because a little of the enormous French accumulation of gold is wandering away, and fears the france may not stay on the gold basis without an absolute embargo.

One Twin Died

Mrs. Marie Delrosso had twins, both girls, but no money. She left one twin in a New York subway station. The other she abandoned in a church. One twin died as soon as it reached the hospital. The other is suffering from lack of food. The mother may be punished, although that would seem like adding insult to injury.

It is bad enough to let a mother watch her twins starving for a while without punishing her for abandoning them in the hope that somebody else would be able to feed them.

This story may interest those who believe in forbidding birth control by law. The Delrosso twins would gladly have had the arrival postponed for a while.

Eleventh Mussolini Year

Italy celebrates, with Mussolini, the eleventh anniversary of the march on Rome which established Fascism as the government of Italy. Mussolini's message to the Italian people declares that Fascism is "the hope of the world."

It has certainly worked wonders in Italy. But the world will ask, "After Mussolini, what?" and "What after Stalin, Kemal Pasha Hitler?"

That any particular brand of autocracy is, or could be, "the hope of the world" is doubtful.

What suits the Italians would not suit China. And what might suit either would not suit the United States.

We must all work out our problems separately and hope for the best.

Original Nudist Colony

Earnest anti-nudists of Chicago demand legislation to keep camps for nudists out of Illinois. They draft a law providing that "any collection of individuals—three or more in number—unclad and naked shall be regarded as disorderly." "Three or more" would exempt nudist gatherings of two only, perhaps a concession to our original father and mother, Adam and Eve, who had the original nudist camp in Eden.

A judge in Vienna divorces a couple, one Jewish, the other a so-called "Aryan," saying, "Racial differences such as between Aryans and Jews must inevitably lead to conjugal shipwreck." Why? The first August Belmont, who was a Jew, and extremely able, married the daughter of Commodore Perry, who won the battle of Lake Erie. She was what Hitler calls "an Aryan," in reality a mixture of many non-Semitic races.

August Belmont and his "Aryan" wife got along well together in every way, especially socially. They dominated society in New York so completely that other "society leaders," in days before "the four hundred" was invented by Ward McAllister, had to combine to give "the patriarchs' ball" on a scale that could compete with the Belmonts. McAllister is authority for this statement.

It was whispered, in awe, "August Belmont spends $80,000 a year entertaining." That would seem small now, hardly enough to keep your garage going, or it would hardly have done so before 1929.

Delayed Execution

Twelve years ago Paul Ludwidice, convicted of murder in the first degree, became insane a few hours before the execution date and was put in the insane asylum. Now, his sanity restored, he sits in a death cell, waiting for Governor Lehman of New York to appoint a day for his trip to the electric chair. It seems a little heartless to execute a man after waiting 12 years. He might better have been put out of the way when he was supposed to be insane. Then he would not have known what happened. The same life that is being taken now would have been taken then.

Land of Plenty

Those "a little short of ready cash"—of whom there are several in the United States—will be comforted, perhaps, by news that the funds held by member banks of the federal reserve system increased this week by $500,000,000, a new high record of $5[illegible].

There is plenty of money, plenty of everything. The "farrow" sows. The difficulty seems to be in distribution.

Homemaker's Question Box

Question—How is scalloped liver and rice prepared?

Answer—This recipe is suggested by Alma Garvin, extension specialist in nutrition for the Ohio State university.

1 cup rice, 1-2 lb. liver, sliced, 1 onion sliced, 1-2 cup rice water, 4 slices bacon, 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 3 T. bacon fat.

Wash rice and cook in 2 quarts of salted water. Drain rice and save 1-2 cup rice water. Fry bacon until crisp, remove and brown the onion in the fat. Salt the liver and brown it slowly in the bacon fat after the onion is done. Cut up the liver and bacon mix with the onion. Mix the bacon fat with rice. Make a layer of the rice in a greased baking dish. Add the liver mixture and continue until all the ingredients are used. Pour the rice water around the sides of the dish. Cover and bake for about 30 minutes.

Just Things

BY EDNA S. DUTTON

Hallowe'en

THE good old days weren't so bad when it came to putting on a real honest-to-goodness Hallowe'en celebration according to one who harks back occasionally by way of comparison. "Where," she asks, "will you find a wagon to hang on a fence or finding the wagon, where can one find a picket fence." Of course you were under suspicion for weeks afterwards when the neighbor's horse failed to show up for breakfast the morning of Nov. 1 and you walked the straight and narrow for days. Knowing full well that another stunt would let loose the cat o nine tails, but the worst punishment of all was the never, never daring to tell just how much you actually did know about the night's mischief.

On The Spot

RARE as it is to have two pairs of shoes these days this very circumstance put one woman in an embarassing spot the other day and left the man in the shoe repair shop wondering whether he was being lynched at or with. Bustling into the shop the woman waited her turn and asked to have her shoes repaired while she waited. Prepared for a few moments contemplation on the afternoons program she balanced herself on one foot and removed the other shoe. Somewhat surprised she noted the heel and toe were in good shape but she "knew" the other shoe needed repairs. It didn't. Mentioning something about this not being the right pair she turned her toes toward the door and in the parlance of the era, was her face red.

Luxuries

THINGS may move in cycles and if they keep going long enough they surely get switched about. There are folks who remember when jogging across country behind a good driving nag, their buggy was to own an automobile. In fact the last word in luxury would be theirs should they ever sit behind the steering wheel of a gas buggy. And we're asking you, doesn't it sniff of luxury in the superlative degree to own a driving or racing nag?

AUXILIARY PLANS HALLOWE'EN PARTY

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE.

Mrs. Van Berg's Story.

I MUST tell some one. It just goes on and on in my head all the time. I don't sleep you know." "You can tell me. I'm safe," said Caroline. And then as soon as she had said it she had a revulsion of feeling. "No don't tell me don't tell me anything." Because if she did, and then thought it was true, I should have to tell them."

Susie shook her head again. "It wasn't like that. What did you think? I didn't shoot Elmer. I didn't mean that. Did you think I did?"

"I don't know. I didn't want you to tell me anything you'd feel sorry about afterwards."

"I must tell someone," said Susie piteously. "If I don't I'll go crazy."

She broke off with a start. "Look out of that door and see there's no one listening."

Caroline opened the door and looked out. There was no one in sight. The courtyard between the room and the passage was empty. The air was cold. Against the pale [sky] rimmed window above there was [a] inky cloud hung. Rain or snow across the sky. It was odd to think the sun might have set already.

She went back to the fire and sat down.

"There's no one there."

And at once without any preliminaries Susie Van Berg said:

"Jim shot Elmer."

"No," said Caroline. "No."

"Jim shot him. It was my fault. I made Elmer jealous. You know I can't help flirting. I'm made that way. What did Elmer marry me for if he didn't like it? It made him mad, and I was glad. It was the way it is. I liked making him mad. But he ought to have known there was nothing in it."

Caroline heard her voice, harsh and unfamiliar.

"Wasn't there anything in it?"

"Only nonsense," said Jim wouldn't even play up to that. He thought a lot of Elmer. There was an invention they both thought a lot of. That's what Jim came to see him about that night. Did you know he was here the night Elmer was shot?"

Caroline nodded. "What happened?"

"Did you read what I told the police?" I didn't tell any lies, but I didn't tell all the truth. They'd have arrested Jim straight away if I had."

"What didn't you tell?"

"I told them I went downstairs to get a book and heard voices in the study. I didn't tell them that it was Jim's voice I heard."

"What did you hear?"

"They were quarrelling, that's why I listened. I heard Elmer say 'I'm through with you.' And I heard Jim say 'I'm damned if I'll be spoken to like that.'"

"Was that all?"

"No, it wasn't. Jim said 'You take that back.' And then Elmer got up. I heard his chair scrape along the floor and he came towards the door, and I knew how angry he'd be if he found me there and I ran away."

"Jim never shot Mr. Van Berg," said Caroline. "Jim isn't a thief. The person who shot Mr. Van Berg is the person who took the emeralds."

• • •

SUSIE VAN BERG put her hand to her head. She spoke in a weak, extinguished voice.

"I don't mind about the emeralds. He shot Elmer. And I tore the page with his finger prints out of Elmer's book. I knew if the police found it they would arrest him, so I tore it out." She sat bolt upright, her hands locked upon her knee. "I tore it out, but I didn't tear it up. Do you know where he is? If you do, will you tell him that?"

"That you tore it out?"

"Tell him I tore it out, but I didn't tear it up. If Elmer's better, I'll tear it up, but if he doesn't—" Her locked hands strained against the other, a line of lead pallor showed beyond the painted line of her lips. "If he doesn't if he dies—I'm going to give those finger-prints to the police and I'm going to swear that I heard his voice and that I heard him shoot Elmer."

Caroline fought the sharpest fear she had ever known. What had really happened in the library that night?

She steadied herself. Susie Van Berg had not moved. The patch of color on either cheek had spread a little, as a stain spreads in milk.

Caroline said, "Why?" Then as Susie went on staring at her she made a quick movement. "I don't understand. Why did you tear the page out?"

"To help Jim, because it was my fault."

"You won't have helped him very much if you mean to tell the police in the end."

"Only if Elmer dies," said Susie with dry lips. Her eyes stared past Caroline at a picture of Elmer dead. "Jim didn't shoot him."

"Yes, he did. If Elmer gets well, he'll tell me what to do. That's why I tore out the page, and why I didn't tell the police. But if he doesn't get well, I shall say that Jim shot him and that it was my fault. I can't go on like this." There was a dreadful finality about the way she said it.

Caroline got up and put on her coat.

"Are you going?"

"Yes," said Caroline.

Susie drew a long sighing breath and turned her head.

"Is it still raining?"

"I expect so. It looked very black."

Susie shuddered and stood up.

"That's all right. You can't go if there's rain. You'll get your death of cold. You'll have to wait till it breaks," she said.

Now that she was on her feet she was conscious of the fire and the room and the lamp. She looked at the window and then at the door. She was afraid of something. She was afraid of the night and the rain and the dark. She was afraid of Susie Van Berg. She was afraid of the house and of the passages.

She went up to the level of the door and as she lifted her hand to unlock the light of another flash of lightning flared up from behind her and below and a crash more of less than either of the others followed. Urged by a blind instinct for shelter Caroline opened the door.

She was inside the door and leaning against the jamb with the door shut behind her before the second crash of thunder came. She could not have moved to save her life. She was in the room, but she could not see it at all, because a four leaved screen covered the door, one panel being flat against the wall on her left, while the other three zig-zagged out from it at an angle.

Caroline had taken about three steps when in the room on the other side of the screen, someone spoke.

"Do you think it's going over?"

Caroline stood still just where she was. She had only heard that voice once before, but she would have known it anywhere. It was Nesta Riddell who had spoken.

To Be Continued.

Given in Marriage

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Is Warned of a New Threat by Lee Chow

BY ADELL GARRISON.

AT THE sound of Harry Underwood's voice calling "Drop it, Lee Chow! Drop it I tell you!" my father's hand shot out quickly and grasped my arm.

"Stand still!" he commanded, softly but firmly. "Jim!"

"Yes, Mr. Spence!" Jim's usually stolid voice was alert.

"Come with me, Katie, take care of Mrs. Graham until I come back or call her."

He had opened the door as he was speaking, was across the threshold at the last word, Jim at his heels, and the door closed upon a vision of Harry Underwood, erect, towering above the crouching figure of Lee Chow, each man warily watching the other.

"Dey Fighting Doo'el?"

Katie had caught my arm as my father released it and she clutched it tightly with both hands. I could not determine whether fright or a desire to guard me was impelling her. But when I glimpsed her excited eyes, I knew that neither emotion was dominating her, although she, no doubt, was in some degree influenced by both. Patently her movie-soaked soul was thrilled by the adventurous possibilities behind that closed door.

"Vot you tink?" she demanded in a stage whisper that could have been heard in the next room. "Dey fighting doo'el?"

"Of course not!" I answered, a bit impatiently, for I was in no mood to answer questions.

"Den vot matter nit dem?" she persisted. "Me, I tink dot Lee Chow go dot vay dey do in movies—dose foreign men's in south, ven dey room around nit knife in leef, slashing efrybody dey see. Vat you call dat?" I forged."

"Hush! Someone is coming out," I said sternly, balking at explaining to Katie the processes of "going berserk" or "running amuck."

The door was indeed opening, slowly, cautiously, and the next instant Jim slid around the edge of it and closed it after him.

The Warning.

"Vot happened? Vot matter?" Katie clutched his arm and shook him violently as if she would hurry his utterance of the thoughts that were clogging his tongue.

If Jim had planned revenge for her strange reception of his caresses upon her violently colored pajamas, he could not have accomplished his purpose better than by his behavior subsequent to his exit from the room. Behavior which I put down to the mode only in the degree to which "running amuck" failed to express the degree given it.

"He's Gone Batty!"

But as he spoke directly to me, paying no more attention to his wife than if she had been a piece of furniture, I knew that Katie was in imminent danger of the point of primitive biting and scratching.

"Your father says that you please will go to your room right away and stay until he come." He says Katie is to go with you and stay with you. He says he and Mr. Underwood are perfectly safe, but that your coming into the room would make things bad just now. So if you will just go up right away, I can hurry back."

"All right for you, Mercator Smarty!" Katie spat the words at him venomously. "Keep your old secrets. Me, I kin find out more mit mine eyes shut dan you eef you keep dem open for four weeks of Sundays."

I already had started for the stairway, for I knew that such a message as my father had just sent to me admitted of no delay or quibble in obedience to it. That Jim understood its urgency, as well, I knew when he uttered a low tense, "Beat it, quick! I've got to get back in there! The Chink's gone batty."

Sedatives.

A criticism of President Roosevelt's monetary plan voiced by The New York Herald-Tribune declares it is a "shot in the arm," devised to make the farmer feel better for the time being, but which merely serves to add a "fresh element of uncertainty to an already gravely disturbed situation." The President is censured, also, for embarking on the undertaking without "long and careful study and debate and the taking of much expert testimony."

This is a fair treatment of part of the objection to the plan. Unfortunately, when placed in the balance with what is commonly known of the situation, it does not weigh enough to be convincing. It is, to be sure, a "shot in the arm." But because most of the things being tried are of the same nature it can't be condemned on that ground. It is generally conceded that if the patient can be kept under sedatives long enough, his recuperative power will enable him to recover.

One wonders how the President of the United States in a situation like that at present would go about the business of submitting a monetary policy to debate. The process would seem to entail convening congress in special session, and the Herald-Tribune scarcely can claim that the house of representatives and the senate would be in the mood to produce from their deliberations anything more constructive than Mr. Roosevelt's plan, granting as true all the things that are charged against it.

Long chances are the order of the times, chiefly because safe bets disappeared when the economic structure finally collapsed after being out of balance too long. President Roosevelt was elected on the long chance that he might be able to do something. He has done nothing inconsistent with the mandate given him by the majority of a population which registered itself as believing that it was time to quit playing safe according to standards which hadn't held up under strain.

Indelible Impressions.

In a surprise announcement, Albert H. Wiggin, former head of the Chase National bank, has given up the $100,000 retirement pension which was to have marked the bank's annual gratitude for his services. The financier's decision to do this is one of the few voluntary admissions made by individuals under investigation by the senate banking committee that their portions of remuneration in a distressed society may have been a bit out of proportion.

Many have asked themselves, in connection with discussion of the investigations that have revealed so many secrets about the processes of high finance, what will be gained from showing the predatory habits of powerful capitalists. Not infrequently the opinion has been expressed that since there is nothing to be gained but dissatisfaction and loss of confidence, the investigation actually threatens the well-being of the country.

This attitude bespeaks a contentment with the status quo—a contentment which most assuredly does not exist throughout the country. Such things as disclosure that J. P. Morgan, national symbol of money-power, paid no income tax in a year when men with bare subsistence incomes were obliged to pay the tax have done more to restore social balance in the United States than expenditure of a billion dollars in behalf of that large portion of the population which has paid the heaviest penalty for uneven distribution of wealth.

There will be no direct benefit, unfortunately. But it has been demonstrated that those whose abuse of capitalism's privileges has been most flagrant are not invulnerable to the resentment of the great middle current of society. Knowledge that predatory actions can be exposed and punished will do a vast deal to discourage repetition of such action. When an Albert H. Wiggin decides he has no right to a retirement salary of $100,000 a year while other employes of the same institution are receiving barely enough to maintain life, progress is being made. The indelible impression of revealed abuses has been observed with the eyes of good judgment and a reform measure instituted to destroy the impression.

Part of the Fear.

Fear of inflation [illegible] way easily before the [illegible] of inflationists. They [illegible] of appreciation [illegible] they propose until [illegible] sleep without [illegible]

They confuse [illegible] favorite phrases the reason [illegible] ance that banks [illegible] country. The plan [illegible] tion." By using it [illegible] plainly that uncontrolled [illegible] a terrible thing.

Unfortunately, it is the [illegible] of inflation that is dreaded [illegible] itself. Breath spent in [illegible] fits of the process without [illegible] wanted. People want to know [illegible] ress is stopped when limits are [illegible] and who will stop it. Lacking [illegible] tory answer, they refuse to [illegible] operation.

The problem was stated clearly a few years ago by Edwin Walter Kemmerer, authority on money and practical physician for the money ills of many governments. "The great danger is that a highly managed currency will flounder on the rocks of politics," he said. "Prices, wages and debts are affected with such tremendous class interests that when once a currency has broken away from its customary metallic basis the danger is that its controll will cease to be rational or scientific, despite the good intentions of the administrative authorities, and will become a football of politics."

Events have placed the responsibility for preventing mismanagement of managed currency in the hands of the Democratic party in congress and the hands of President Roosevelt in the White House. In the past, the party has been more famed for monetary heresy than good judgment. What it will do in the present remains to be seen. Upon its ability to maintain a reasonable condition of confidence depends directly the party's fate and much of the future of the United States.

Plugging.

From Fort Madison, Ia., scene six years ago this month of a typically American "stunt," comes word of a man who became for a few days back in 1927 a national character. It isn't likely that R. L. Gray will be remembered; six years is a long time.

He was selected and publicized as America's average man. It was the result of an ingenious idea in the head of a magazine writer, who selected Fort Madison as the hypothetical center of the United States and went there to find the average man, on an average street, in an average house, with an average income, intelligence, interests, family and outlook. R. L. Gray was the result.

He was then and is now proprietor of a clothing store. On the brink of 50, he has reached that point where men realize their limitations. He hasn't been a failure by any means, but his dreams of becoming a wealthy man probably ceased to deceive him a good many years ago. It may be assumed that he is content to keep moving along the same line.

R. L. Gray represents, therefore, a modified symbol of the hopes of millions of his countrymen. They, too, don't ask for much. They want security, and that is the hardest thing to get. Even rich men can't be sure they have it. Because this average American represents so much that is truly average, it is interesting to know how he is making out with the depression.

His story is as unexciting and commonplace as his type. While the bombs have been bursting in air and people have been theorizing on the approaching collapse of representative democracy and capitalism, R. L. Gray has been plugging along. "So I studied my field and tried to adjust my business to the needs of the customers. In other words, I tried to sell them the kind of merchandise they wanted at the price they could afford to pay. . . . And by working along this line, and working harder than usual, I think I learned something that'll stand me in good stead when things brighten up all around." Mr. Gray, after six years of oblivion, still is a good sedative.

Last Word.

Simon Michelet, president of the National Get-Out-The Vote club, has compiled figures on the 1932 election. He is able to report progress in fulfilling the aim of his organization.

Approximately 47,500,000 voters were registered. Returns showed that 41,000,000 of them went to the polls, a better record by a million than was established in 1928, a heavy voting year.

Approximately 62 per cent of all persons eligible to vote turned out, in contrast with 50 per cent in 1920. Women voters, it is estimated, accounted for more than 40 per cent of all votes cast.

The vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt was 22,821,538 and for Herbert Hoover 15,761,841, giving Mr. Roosevelt a plurality of 7,059,017. The Republican plurality in 1928 was 6,125,484.

KELLEY'S ISLAND.

Kelley's Island in Lake Erie got its name from one of its owners, Datus Kelley. But he was a comparatively late owner. The first was a Mr. Cunningham whose name it bore for a time. Two Frenchmen joined him but all three left the property in the period of the war of 1812. General Harrison placed a guard at the west end of the island to watch the movements of British ships. It was in 1833 that Datus Kelley of Rockport, near Cleveland, and his brother, Irad Kelley of Cleveland, bought the island, and began to use the red cedar and the stone of the island in the markets. Datus Kelley moved his family to the island and there he remained until his death in 1866, developing the island and selling small tracts to settlers.

New York Day By Day

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—I dined with friends in a penthouse speakeasy the other evening. It was the nursery glint and overstuffed speed of a ball in Versailles. A string orchestra murdered Viennese waltzes in loud contempt and a chanteuse warbled fearlessly [illegible].

Waiters prided themselves under the watchful eye of one of those aristocratic obeisant maitre d'hotels. Ranked in deep-cushioned divans against the wall like so many characters in a play, were headline figures of Broadway. Aren Selwyn, Tommy Manville, Ed Sullivan, Sanchez, the Cuban [illegible] and so on.

But what interested me chiefly was the [illegible] of spirits bubbling about the circular bar. A fleet of collegiate bar-tenders, one with hair so brown a ringer for Skeets Gallagher, jiggled their glasses and bottles with the deftness of Serge Flash of the variety halls.

Every drink of the old Hoffman House was being turned out. Stout-bottomed cocktail tumblers lightly rinsed with absinthe, laced with bourbon and frescoed with fruits and a twist of lemon peel, were [illegible] devised as in what antiquarians [illegible] referred to as twitter were "the good old days."

One [illegible] with a Morris Guest tie [illegible] ordered that poetical Hungarian [illegible] Ho za Lopez, two-thirds the wa[illegible] of Montmorency and one-third Moselle, [illegible] denied. A fat and malicious dam[illegible] confessing to downing her fourth sil[illegible] fizz switched to a more potent [illegible] was avoiding a simple-Simon-look[illegible] for sticking to innocuous and pal[illegible] drinks.

Hanging the hat on spindly, high, short-[illegible] coats were human symbols of the [illegible] moulting sparrows, birds of [illegible] the peacock and others of gay [illegible] wool, of course, as the carrion bird. Twanging in the background the singing [illegible] for spirit boys and sundry specimens of the only gigolo gentry.

I was [illegible] ally intrigued—that term has [illegible] for I like it with a pert jinkee who [illegible] me into conversation. "I'm a little [illegible] from drinkee!" she blurred. But [illegible] shoes had lost its flounce and her [illegible] of a topic more askey than the mode [illegible] An overlord of the establishment had given her bartender the eye. She was to have no more. "How about a sip of your [illegible] inquired. I edged it over. "Danbury Fair stuff," she exclaimed with a wry smack at my lemonade. Then in mocking jest. "Go on down on! Tell me about the pitfalls of our wicked city!" I felt helpless. And rather abused.

Frank Sullivan came in—unconsciously to my rescue. I had a chance to haloo across the pyramid of bottles centering the bar. One of those "hello, how are you" exchanges that might divert my tormentor. "Who's your friend?" she asked. I explained he was a celebrated up-to-the-minute humorist. So she yelled: "Hey you! Bright-sally me and make it timely. I love puns." Sullivan, wiser than I, retreated.

George Jessel was next to swivel on the horizon. I am fascinated by Jessel's walk, the fast stride of a colt torturously haltered. The lady of the Approaching Hiccups observed: "It wouldn't surprise me to see Frisco wiggle out of the woodwork. Hey, Mr. Ouslay, you in the cute white coat. How about another snort? Virgie is now as sober as Judge Seabury. And Count Sour Puss here is twitching to buy wine." I could stand no more, waved to an imaginary friend and skipped the gutter.

At our table the food was arriving. A huge tureen of petite marmite, held high, while a bristling captain as advance guard cleared an imperious path. Such studied gestures beglamour a meal. European fold-de-rol, of course, but American cafes are capitalizing it. I think it was Roy Howard who longed for a red corpuscled spurt of courage to scream to a waiter: "Take it back! It looks terrible!" Just as a bowing captain lifts the lid of the entree for the host to admire. What a glorious way to put a dinner on the blink.

I was not to escape the loose-tongued lady exiting. She was fostering with a stick of lip rouge before an anteroom mirror. "Goo' bye Daddy. You devastating spendthrift you. Be careful of the night air," she called. So loud [illegible] the cloak room girls could hear. [illegible] bitter!

Washington And Wall Street

BY GEORGE DURNO

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Certain lads dealing in "hot oil" may have been cheered by the fact that no outstanding NRA code chiselers have been brought to book despite the President's enforcing regulation.

They won't be feeling so chipper in a week or so. Secretary of Interior Ickes, in charge of regulating oil prices and production, is out to step hard on somebody's neck. The oil administrator isn't bothering about the small fry. In fact he even made exceptions in his regulations to give some of them leeway.

But he is after the big fellows with a net.

Hoose Gow

For some days special agents of the interior department have been busy in Texas and other spots in the West gathering evidence. Their orders were to hook a big fish or none at all.

Reports back to Washington indicate the agents have made a tidy show. The evidence is now being sifted to find out which is the most airtight. As soon as that job is completed Ickes plans to give the oil industry a horrible example.

Penalty for violation of Ickes' regulations runs up to $1,000 fine or six months in the bastile.

Pigs

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's scheme of buying up pigs to keep the big bad wolf from the farmers hasn't panned out just the way he hoped.

What Wallace was shooting at was the acquisition of a lot of sows. His idea was to apply birth control ideas to the hog industry with a vengeance and cut down the surplus.

When the secretary's call went out for pigs he got pigs all right—but they were mostly runts.

From all points of the compass came little pigs—or unfortunate specimens that probably were covered only with football makings.

The farmer of the corn belt knows his pigs. He and his father and his father's father have long looked on pigs as the mortgage lifters. If the government wanted to buy pigs for more than the current market price that was okay with him.

But he didn't let go of the mamma sow. Not by a jugful. She's still grunting contentedly out in the pen anticipating another of Mr. Winchell's blessed events.

Emigres

Madame Secretary of Labor Perkins has another problem on her shoulders.

"What to do with all the White Russians who are illegally in this country once we recognize the Soviets?"

There are literally thousands of such in the U. S. A. without benefit of passport. They'd have been deported long ago but you can't deport anybody to a country you don't recognize.

Included in this large group are many officers of the Czar's old army. Some of them have found the going so tough they've taken up jobs as doormen or gone to work bathing dishes.

Also there are the princes, dukes, counts, etc., who have been getting lightly from the marriage of one wealthy American woman to another. A lot of them came in by the back door and probably grew their titles after entry.

They're political refugees now. Once we shake hands with President Kalinin they'll click for a nice trip back to the U. S. S. R. where they probably will be thrown to the Siberian wolves.

That is if Madame Secretary decides. She has [illegible] on her desk.

The first to call [illegible] fact all these cases will [illegible] be reviewed after recognition were Robe Carl White, former assistant secretary of labor and [illegible] partner. They sent a [illegible] statement to that effect [illegible] all the newspapers.

A correspondent [illegible] service indignantly [illegible] Mr. White was trying to [illegible] business for his new [illegible] Credit.

Representatives of the committee for the nation, the Farmers' union and other arch-inflationists had a meeting in the office of Senator Thomas of Oklahoma this week. Thomas is their mouthpiece.

One of the proposals put forward by spokesmen for the Farmers' union was nationalization of all credit facilities.

It was argued that the government already is in the banking business up to its neck so why not get wet all over?

The farm agents pointed to the multitudinous R. F. C. operations, the extension of various kinds of crop loans and the government's invasion of rural and urban mortgage fields.

Bearing in mind the pressing burden of debt that hangs over the farming regions they would like to see Uncle Sam set up paying and receiving windows and a loan department and frankly call it a bank.

Favorable rates of interest would be a prime consideration together with liberal credit.

Certain officials of the R. F. C. are speculating privately on how long it will be before the government goes into the investment banking business.

In other words they are wondering if the public treasury is on the verge of underwriting capital expansion wherever the vested powers deem it advisable. This of course would be on long terms.

The short term financing is already very much of an actuality.

Notes.

Inquiries at the White House as to when new District of Columbia commissioners (who jointly act as mayor or governor) will be appointed have become so monotonous most of the out-of-town reporters laugh when they are put on. One local reporter tried to dodge the derision of his colleagues by asking the question of President Roosevelt in French. . . He got an answer in kind but the final word was in Spanish—"Manana," —"tomorrow." . . When the Soviets' first ambassador comes to Washington he will find a sumptuous ambassy awaiting him—relic of the days when Czar Nicholas reigned. . . Diplomatic corps men — and women—are wondering what became of its most excellent wine cellar.

BY JAMES M'MULLIN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Local bankers say the government has its tongue in its cheek when it says it isn't interested in running the banks.

There are some nifty jokers in the law authorizing the R. F. C. to purchase preferred stock. Any bank accepting the offer gives the government the right to limit fees and salaries and even to replace officers or directors unsatisfactory in its judgment. And all banks are supposed to accept the offer. Moreover the comptroller of the currency can refuse at discretion to permit the banks to get out of stock to the government (and therefore out of control). "If that isn't control it's a damn good imitation."

The government may not exercise its privileges but what a hidden wallop it packs! The New York banks are exempted from these provisions by special agreement but the principle of the thing has raised a local bumper crop of shudders.

Dividends.

Another form of bank supervision, apart from preferred stock—is a definite policy of limiting dividends. Hereafter reserves will get first call on profits and no back talk allowed. This may hurt stockholders' feelings but it should be a salutary one.

Credit.

The New York banks have jacked up their loans on other than security collateral by $156,000,000 in the last three weeks. There's nothing phony about the gain—very little of it went into federal funds or bankers' acceptances. The rest is straight commercial credit.

The banks do fondly hope that Washington is pleased.

Financing.

Government plans are shaping to take over corporate financing if Wall Street declines to function under the securities act. In their present stage they involve a super-bank setup outside the inevitable R. F. C. Henry Bruere is likely to have the problem dumped in his lap in the near future.

The point is that industry's demands for refunding capital must be met as they develop in the next year—or else. This way out will enable the government to take care of industry without giving in to Wall Street.

Planning.

Industrial planning is creeping up on us by degrees. New York approves that General Johnson will not allow new cotton mills to open or old ones to expand production capacity without special permission.

This is one more step on the road to the Cartel system in industry—which even conservatives now admit looks inevitable.

Works.

That $2,000,000,000 allocated to public works sounds better than it is. A large proportion of the contracts involved have not been awarded yet. Local experts insist that not more than half the allotted amount can be spent in the next 12 months.

Sponsors of one public works project claim that no snail ever moved like PWA. They say they could put 80,000 men to work within a few weeks and keep them busy for more than a year. 'Our plan was presented six weeks ago and the only answer we got out of the public works crowd is advice to scale it down because it's too big. Is that a way to act when you're supposed to be speeding up employment?"

New housing projects—as apart from slum clearance—have mostly been shelved because they might enrich private capital and start stories of favoritism. But New York authorities say they represent the best prospect of creating a lot of jobs in a hurry. Slum clearance takes months to swing into action after approval because of negotiations for condemning or buying land. With new housing the land problem is solved in advance. Neither Ickes nor his aides are willing to let down the bars because of anxiety to keep black sheep out of the herd. No post-war scandals wanted.

Discretion

One of the things that caused Pecora to issue wholesale subpoenas for members of the New York Stock Exchange was the matter of discretionary accounts. Although he gave no inkling that he had that angle in mind the Exchange authorities sensed an attack on this most vulnerable point. Hence the blank refusal.

If Pecora should air the abuses of discretionary powers on customers' accounts—which will be extremely difficult to prove—more than one respectable Exchange member would be in risk of expulsion. Sherr lambs will lend a willing hand in bringing out the full story.

Pressure

Despite disclosure high pressure salesmen have not vanished from the scene. Dignified institutions whose "conservative" issues went sour are once more sending out well mannered young men to convince investors who have a few bonds left that they ought to make a switch. The "house" makes a quarter of a point each way and the persuader gets his commission.

One Twin Died

Mrs. Marie Delrosso had twins, both girls, but no money. She left one twin in a New York subway station. The other she abandoned in a church. One twin died as soon as it reached the hospital. The other is suffering from lack of food. The mother may be punished, although that would seem like adding insult to injury.

It is bad enough to let a mother watch her twins starving for a while without punishing her for abandoning them in the hope that somebody else would be able to feed them.

This story may interest those who believe in forbidding birth control by law. The Delrosso twins would gladly have had the arrival postponed for a while.

Eleventh Mussolini Year

Italy celebrates, with Mussolini, the eleventh anniversary of the march on Rome which established Fascism as the government of Italy. Mussolini's message to the Italian people declares that Fascism is "the hope of the world."

It has certainly worked wonders in Italy. But the world will ask "After Mussolini, what?" and "What after Stalin, Kemal Pasha Hitler?"

That any particular brand of autocracy is, or could be, "the hope of the world" is doubtful.

What suits the Italians would not suit China. And what might suit either would not suit the United States.

We must all work out our problems separately and hope for the best.

Original Nudist Colony

Earnest anti-nudists of Chicago demand legislation to keep camp for nudists out of Illinois. They draft a law providing that "any collection of individuals—three or more in number—unclad and naked shall be regarded as disorderly." "Three or more" would exempt nudist gatherings of two only, perhaps a concession to our original father and mother, Adam and Eve, who had the original nudist camp in Eden.

A judge in Vienna divorces a couple, one Jewish, the other a so called "Aryan," saying, "Racial differences such as between Aryans and Jews must inevitably lead to conjugal shipwreck." Why? The first August Belmont, who was a Jew, and extremely able, married the daughter of Commodore Perry, who won the battle of Lake Erie. She was what Hitler calls "an Aryan," in reality a mixture of many non-Semitic races.

August Belmont and his "Aryan" wife got along well together in every way, especially socially. They dominated society in New York so completely that other "society leaders," in days before "the four hundred" was invented by Ward McAllister, had to combine to give "the patriarchs" ball on a scale that could compete with the Belmonts. McAllister is authority for this statement.

It was whispered, in awe, "August Belmont spends $80,000 a year entertaining." That would seem small now, hardly enough to keep your garage going, or it would hardly have done so before 1929.

Delayed Execution

Twelve years ago Paul Leguisic, convicted of murder in the first degree, became insane a few hours before the execution date and was put in the insane asylum. Now his sanity restored, he sits in a death cell, waiting for Governor Lehman of New York to appoint a day for his trip to the electric chair. It seems a little heartless to execute a man after waiting 12 years. He might better have been put out of the way when he was supposed to be insane. Then he would not have known what happened. The same life that is being taken now would have been taken then.

Homemaker's Question Box

Question—How is scalloped liver and rice prepared?

Answer—This recipe is submitted by Alma Garvin, extension specialist in nutrition for the Ohio State university.

1 cup rice, 1-2 lb liver, sliced, 1 onion sliced, 1-2 cup rice water, 4 slices bacon, 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 3 T. bacon fat.

Wash rice and cook in 2 quarts of salted water. Drain rice and save 1-2 cup rice water. Fry bacon until crisp, remove, and brown the onion in the fat. Salt the liver and brown it slowly in the bacon fat after the onion is done. Cut up the liver and bacon, mix with the onion. Mix the bacon fat with rice. Make a layer of the rice in a greased baking dish. Add the liver mixture and continue until all the ingredients are used. Pour the rice water around the sides of the dish. Cover and bake for about 30 minutes.

Just Things

BY EDNA S. DUTTON

Hallowe'en

THE good old days weren't so bad when it came to putting on a real honest-to-goodness Hallowe'en celebration according to one who harks back occasionally by way of comparison. "Where," she asks will you find a wagon to hang on a fence or finding the wagon, where can one find a picket fence" Of course you were under suspicion for weeks afterwards when the neighbors horse failed to show up for breakfast the morning of Nov. 1 and you walked the straight and narrow for days. Knowing full well that another straw would let loose the cat of nine tails, but the worst punishment of all was the never, never daring to tell just how much you actually did know about the night's mischief.

On The Spot

RAINE as it is to have two pairs of shoes these days this very circumstance put one woman in an embarassing spot the other day and left the man in the shoe repair shop wondering whether he was being laughed at or with. Bustling into the shop the woman waited her turn and asked to have her shoes repaired while she waited. Prepared for a few moments contemplation on the attendant's program she balanced herself on one foot and removed the other shoe. Somewhat surprised she noted the heel and toe were in good shape but she "knew" the other shoe needed repairs. It didn't. Murmuring something about this not being the right pair she turned her toes toward the door and in the [illegible] of the era, was her face red.

Luxuries

THINGS may move in cycles and if they keep going long enough they surely get switched about. There are folks who remember when, jaunting across country behind a good driving nag, their big yen was to own an automobile. In fact the last word in luxury would be theirs should they ever sit behind the steering wheel of a gas buggy. And we're asking you, doesn't it sniff of luxury in the superlative deree to own a driving or riding nag?

AUXILIARY PLANS HALLOWE'EN PARTY

Outrageous Fortune

by Patricia Wentworth

[illegible] Copyright 1933, J. B. Lippincott [illegible]

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE.

Mrs. Van Berg's Story.

I MUST [illegible] some one. It just goes on and on in my head all the time. I don't sleep. You know." "You can tell me. I'm safe," said Caroline. And then as soon as she had said it she had a revulsion of feeling. "No, don't tell me, don't! Don't tell me anything! Because if you did it, and they thought it was [illegible] I should have to tell them."

Susie shook her head again. "It wasn't like that. What did you think?" I didn't shoot Elmer. I didn't mean that. Did you think I did?"

"I don't know. I didn't want you to tell me anything you'd feel sorry about afterwards."

"I must tell someone," said Susie piteously. "If I don't I'll go crazy."

She broke off with a start. "Look out of that door and see if there's anyone listening."

Caroline opened the door and looked out. There was no one in sight. The corridor between the room and the passage was empty. The ash was cold. Against the uncurtained window-blind the rain was beating. No inky cloud hung like a curtain across the sky. It was only dark as the sun might have set already.

She went back to the sofa and sat down.

"There's no one there."

And at once, without any preliminaries, Susie Van Berg said:

"Jim shot Elmer."

"No!" said Caroline. "No."

"Jim shot him. It was my fault. I made Elmer jealous. You know I can't help flirting. I'm made that way. Why did Elmer marry me for if he didn't like it? It made him mad. And he's mad to know the way it is. I liked making him mad. But he ought to have known there was nothing in it."

Caroline heard her voice, harsh and unfamiliar.

"Wasn't there anything in it?"

"Only nonsense — and Jim wouldn't even play up to that. He thought a lot of Elmer. There was an invention they both thought a lot of. That's what Jim came to see him about that night. Did you know he was here the night Elmer was shot?"

Caroline nodded. "Who" happened?"

"Did you read what I said the police? I didn't tell any lies, but I didn't tell all the truth. They'd have arrested Jim straight away if I had."

"What didn't you tell?"

"I told them I went downstairs to get a book and heard voices in the study. I didn't tell them that it was Jim's voice I heard."

"What did you hear?"

"They were quarrelling. That's why I listened. I heard Elmer say, 'I'm through with you!' And I heard Jim say 'I'm damned if I'll be spoken to like that!'"

"Was that all?"

"No, it wasn't. Jim said 'You take that back!' And then I must have got up. I heard his chair scrape along the floor and he came towards the door, and I thought how angry he'd be if he found me there and I ran away."

"Jim never shot Mr. Van Berg," said Caroline. "Jim isn't a thief. The person who shot Mr. Van Berg is the person who got the emeralds."

• • •

SUSIE VAN BERG put her hand to her head. She spoke in a weak, extinguished voice.

"I don't mind about the emeralds—he shot Elmer. And I tore the page with his finger prints out of Elmer's book. I knew if the police found it they would arrest him, so I tore it out." She sat bolt upright, her hands locked upon her knee. "I tore it out. I didn't tear it up. Do you know where it is? If you do will you hand it to me that?"

"That you tore it out?"

"Tell him I tore it out, but I didn't tear it up. If Elmer gets better, I'll tear it up, but if he dies—" Her locked hands clutched one against the other, a line of livid pallor showed beyond the painted line of her lips. "If he doesn't—if he dies—I'm going to give those finger-prints to the police and I'm going to swear that I heard Jim's voice and that I heard him shoot Elmer."

Caroline fought the strangest fear she had ever known. What had really happened in the library that night?

She steadied herself. Susie Van Berg had not moved. The patch of color on either cheek had spread a little, as a stain spreads in milk.

Caroline said, "Why?" Then as Susie went on staring at her she made a quick movement. "I don't understand. Why did you tear the page out?"

"To help Jim—because it was my fault."

"You won't have helped him very much if you mean to tell the police in the end."

"Only if Elmer dies," said Susie with dry lips. Her eyes stared past Caroline at a picture of Elmer dead.

"Jim didn't shoot him."

"Yes—he did. If Elmer gets well, he'll tell me what to do. That's why I tore out the page, and why I didn't tell the police. But if he doesn't get well, I shall say that Jim shot him and that it was my fault. I can go on like this." There was a dreadful finality about the way she said it.

Caroline got up and put on her coat.

"Are you going?"

"Yes," said Caroline.

Susie drew a long sighing breath and turned her head.

"Is it still raining?"

"I expect so—it looked very black."

Susie shuddered and stood up.

"There's nothing. You can't go if there's nothing."

Caroline [illegible] and broke [illegible] and [illegible].

Now [illegible] was on her feet she was [illegible] Her head burned, [illegible] the cool [illegible] and [illegible] Outside [illegible] it might [illegible] for some days at Jim's. She [illegible] and went [illegible] and [illegible].

As soon as she had shut the [illegible] began to run. She [illegible] away and she [illegible] might call [illegible] She turned the corner [illegible] again. The lights were [illegible] She stopped [illegible] wondered if she [illegible] the wrong turning [illegible] and rambling [illegible] a bewildered feeling of [illegible] one of direction [illegible] of lighting gave [illegible] of two outdoors [illegible] foot of a narrow [illegible] followed [illegible] of those pools of [illegible] and like slant glistened down upon an [illegible] the rain was deafening.

Caroline shrank instinctively away from the window and found herself six or seven steps up the stair holding to the narrow baluster and waiting for the horrible noise to stop.

When she opened her eyes, she saw above her a very faint streak of light. There was a door a few steps up and the light came from under it. It was just a thin pale streak but it meant that there was someone in the room. Caroline had a feeling that some one else's company won't be pleasant. She could say that she had lost her way in the passages.

She went up to the level of the door and as she lifted her hand to knock the light of another flash flared up from behind her and below and a crash more violent than either of the others followed. Urged by a blind instinct for shelter, Caroline opened the door.

She was inside the door and leaning against the jamb with the door shut behind her before the second crack of thunder came. She could not have moved to save her life. She was in the room, but she could not see it at all, because a faint leafed screen covered the door, one panel being flat against the wall on her left, while the other three zig-zagged out from it at an angle.

Caroline had taken about three steps when, in the room on the other side of the screen, someone spoke.

"Do you think it's going over?"

Caroline stood still just where she was. She had only heard that voice once before but she would have known it anywhere. It was Nesta Ribbett who had spoken.

Given in Marriage

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Is Warned of a New Threat by Lee Chow

By ADELE GARRISON.

AT THE sound of Harry Underwood's voice taking "Drop it, Lee Chow! Drop it! I tell you!" my father's hand shot up quickly and grasped my arm.

"Stand still!" he commanded, softly but firmly. "Jim!"

"Yes, Mr. Spencer." Jim's usually stolid voice was alert.

"Come with me, Kattie, take care of Mrs. Graham until I come back or call her."

He had opened the door as he was speaking—was across the threshold at the last word, Jim at his heels, and the door closed upon a vision of Harry Underwood, erect, towering above the crouching figure of Lee Chow, each man warily watching the other.

"Dey Fighting Don'ts?"

Kattie had caught my arm as my father rebuked it, and she clutched it tightly with both hands. I could not determine whether fright or a desire to guard me was impelling her. But when I glimpsed her excited eyes, I knew that neither emotion was dominating her, although she, no doubt, was in some degree influenced by both. Patently her movie-soaked soul was thrilled by the adventurous possibilities behind that closed door.

"Vot you tink?" she demanded in a stage whisper that could have been heard in the next room. "Dey fighting don'ts?"

"Of course not," I answered, a bit impatiently, for I was in no mood to answer questions.

"Den vot matter mit dem?" she persisted. "Me, I tink dot Lee Chow go dot vay dey do in movies—dose foreign men's in south, ven dey room around mit knife in teef, smashing efrebody dey see. Vat you call dot? I forget."

"Hush! Someone is coming out," I said sternly, balking at explaining to Kattie the processes of "going berserk" or "running amuck."

The door was indeed opening, slowly, cautiously, and the next instant Jim slid around the edge of it, and closed it after him.

The Warning.

"Vot happened? Vot matter?" Kattie clutched his arm and shook him violently, as if she would hurry her rather slow thought processes to the attack.

If Jim had planned revenge for her rude reception of his caresses upon her violently [illegible] proposals, he could not have served his purpose better than by his behavior subsequent to his exit. His behavior which I knew had its [illegible] only in the desire of a frightened "one track" mind to carry out directions given it.

"He's Gone Batty!"

But as he spoke directly to me, paying no more attention to his wife than if she had been a piece of furniture [illegible] Kattie was infuriated almost to the point of primitive biting and scratching.

"Your father says that you please will go to your room right away and stay until he comes. He says Kattie is to go with you and stay with you. He also and Mr. Underwood are perhaps safe but that your coming into the room would make things bad just now. So if you will just go up right away, I can hurry back."

"All right for you, Meester Smarty!" Kattie spat the words at him venomously. "Keep your old secrets. Me, I kin find oudt more mit mine eyes shut dan you eef you keep dem open for four weeks of Sundays."

I already had started for the stairway, for I knew that such a message as my father had just sent to me admitted of no delay or quibble in obedience to it. That Jim understood its urgency, as well, I knew when he uttered a low tense, "Beat it, quick! I've got to get back in there! The Chink's gone batty."

C., D. & M. Ready To Assist Merchants in Getting Most Effective Results from Lighting.

You can test your lighting in a manner with a telephone book. Open the book at random. There every word stand out sharp and clear? Can you read any street address or number rapidly, with perfect ease? If your lighting is correct you should be able to do so readily, for the telephone book is scientifically designed for perfect legibility under proper light. So if you can't read it easily, if you have to squint or [illegible] book closer to your face, [illegible] in a lighting engineer [illegible] your lighting.

[illegible] to bed when the [illegible] merchant has an [illegible] looking his well [illegible] as the star salesman. Window [illegible] can easily be turned into more buyers if your merchandise is displayed in up to date well lighted windows.

A Convincing Experiment.

A department store owner tried this simple experiment. He placed the same merchandise in two windows. One window he lighted to a very high intensity, in the other window he made no change in his lighting conditions. An actual check revealed that five people stopped at the well lighted window to one at the poorly lighted window. This is conclusive proof that window lighting can be your greatest asset.

It is easy to find out how to make your windows show off the color, style and quality of your wares. The C. D. & M. lighting specialist will gladly study not only your window lighting, but will also advise how you can give your building the most effective kind of electric sign.

Good lighting, however does a great deal more for stores than attract to the windows. In the windows, or in the store, it displays merchandise at the very best advantage. By showing each item in true form, texture, and color it substantially decreases the number of exchanges and returns and it definitely stimulates sales.

Repeated tests show that most stores are inadequately lighted even though their owners are usually firm in the belief that "Our lighting is good enough." If you want to increase your business, and handle more customers with fewer clerks; in short, if you want to make more money, your lighting must be the best money can buy.

The Path to Success.

Every merchant for the past three years has been staging a battle, the outcome of which spelled either success or failure. We have been experiencing the "survival of the fittest." The fittest today means the store owner who is an up to date merchant, showing the latest merchandise in a well lighted store. Now, when there is a decided up-trend in business conditions, it is even more necessary that we do not just mark time, but we must get in line and do everything in our power to change shoppers into customers. The most effective way of doing this today is by increasing and modernizing your present lighting.

The C. D. & M. Electric company will gladly recommend lighting changes. This service is free. You will be under no obligation if you write or phone for a special appointment.

ModernMerchant Reports Results of Good Lighting

F. R. McDaniel, whose store is pictured at the top of this page, told the writer the following facts about grocery store lighting. "Good lighting has done two things for my store. First, it has given my store a cheery atmosphere, regardless of how gloomy it is on the outside. This gives customers a buying attitude, which is very necessary to make a profitable sale. I find that my clerks work better with greater ease under good lights. Second, it has increased my sales. Many people come into my store to buy a loaf of bread or a quart of milk and nothing else. These same people now stop and look on my shelves, which are now lighted enough to attract attention. Nine times out of ten they will buy a can of corn or a can of fruit, which I have properly displayed under proper lighting. Good lighting has been my best salesman."

This same change can take place in your store. It is very simple and very economical to hire Mr. Good Lighting to work for you twenty-four hours a day.

Good Lighting Increases Sales In This Store

THINGS ALL SHOULD KNOW ABOUT CORRECT LIGHTING

A Right Way of Lighting Every Store

MANY factors must be considered in store lighting. Obviously the location, the standard of lighting in competing stores in the neighborhood, kind of merchandise dealt in, requirements of different departments, ceiling height, number of aisles, existence of mezzanines or balconies, must all be considered.

Dark backgrounds which absorb much light, the displaying of merchandise such as men's suits and women's dark colored dresses, or furniture which is both dark in color and also mirror-like in finish, call for expert knowledge if good standards of lighting are to be reached and maintained.

Lighting standards have changed greatly in a few years. Where big stores were considered advanced with lighting of 7 to 10 foot-candles a few years ago, 15 to 20 foot-candles are being used now, and in a few years 30 foot-candles or more will be common.

Merchants have discovered—in many cases their competitors have shown them—that so simple a factor as doubling the illumination of a store brings an immediate influx of new patrons, increased sales, lowered selling costs, and greater profits.

• • •

Light Assures Speed and Accuracy in Banks

IN banks where figures mean money, mistakes may be costly. The necessity for accuracy in banks demand a high standard of illumination. Handling of money, manipulation of accounting machines, and making ledger entries require good light. If workers cannot see well—a fault of inadequate lighting—frequent mistakes may occur.

Bank exteriors usually portray stability and dignity. Well-controlled lighting of high intensity extends this impression to the interior. Dim lighting in banks may leave customers with doubtful impressions and reflect on that organization.

In cities where tall buildings cut off direct sunlight, banks on ground floors usually require artificial illumination for the entire day. In fact, many banks have basement departments where daylight never penetrates. Here, artificial light is always necessary.

• • •

School Illumination for Young Eyes

LOW intensity lighting, glare from bright light sources, reflections from shiny desk tops and blackboards, all hinder vision and impair eyesight of students. Such conditions must be eliminated. Carefully positioned windows can make maximum use of natural light. This, however, should be supplemented with properly designed artificial lighting.

The most exacting visual task in the schoolroom is to read writing on blackboards. Poorly arranged windows, blackboards with glossy surfaces, and bright light sources, natural or artificial, obscure the writing and make seeing difficult.

Corridor lighting in schools should be of higher intensity than ordinary hallways. Newer schools have corridors with rows of lockers along each side and hence require good illumination for the convenience of the students.

Schools more than any other buildings should be equipped with automatic lighting control. Instead of expecting the teacher to know when artificial illumination is necessary the Westinghouse Photoelectric lighting control relay can turn on class room lights the instant daylight becomes inadequate, and off when daylight increases.

By investigation educational boards in American cities may be amazed at the appalling percentage of defective eyes resulting from improper illumination—a condition of Twilight Zone lighting.

Pick up and pads of abrasive material have been invented to resurface sanding machines.

PLANS FOR FUTURE ARE LAID BY C. OF C.

...ings than this country ever has ... seen in the way of business de... velopment and community advance... ment," Mr Maddox asserted. "The town with a program of progress mapped out through its Chamber of Commerce is going to be one jump ahead of the towns lacking this sort of program," he added.

"Join the Chamber of Commerce and find out what goes on behind the scenes in the way of com... munity development," he continued. "Frequently we see that tragic picture of a businessman taking money out of a community and not giving that community anything in return.

"Pay your town what you owe it ... is going you a good living and possibly more—and you'll get the biggest kick out of it you ever had.

Plan for Future

"Plan a program that covers a period of years. Get in step with the upturn throughout the country. We're sitting here on the eve of a great period of development. You're getting started on the right foot through your Chamber organization. Keep going forward and make Marion the best city in the state."

Mr. Maddox also discussed some of the aspects of the average city, blaming many of these for the absence of better community spirit.

"The trouble is," he asserted, "we have too many leaners and not enough lifters; too many knockers and too many petty jealousies among businessmen. It's a time to forget differences and join hands in a constructive community program.

"Too many persons are going out of town to do their shopping. We need more community loyalty. If a person can't be loyal to his town, he shouldn't live in it, if he can't say a good word for it, he should keep quiet.

Other pleas for community service were made by Karl W. Schell, president of the Chamber, who asserted that "money contributions to the Chamber don't mean a thing unless backed up by a willingness to work," and by Guy C. Steward, member of the Chamber, who urged Marion businessmen to "get on your toes" in a community program in which each man does his part.

W. D. Brown, manager of the Chamber, thanked the drive leaders and workers for their support in the drive.

IS THIS A JOKE OR REAL THEFT?

Thieves or Hallowe'ens who visited the residence of G. F. Emerson on Union street near Center street last night evidently had no fears of overwork, according to a report made to police today.

For as they left, they took with them an ice box and a typewriter from the porch of the residence, Emerson said.

HUSBANDS ARE GUESTS

Husbands of the members were guests when the Happy Thought circle of the First Reformed church entertained with a masquerade and Hallowe'en party Thursday night at the church. Contest honors were awarded Mrs. Ellen Smith, Mrs. Wayne Barnhill, Mrs. Edna Andrews Howard Smith, Mr. Emahiser and Carl Haberman. Refreshments were served. About 30 attended.

HOSTESS TO CLASS

Mrs. Leona Sanderson of Davis street was hostess to the Royal Banner class of the Fite Memorial Baptist church Thursday night. The occasion was a Hallowe'en party, which was attended by Mr. B. E. DAIRIES WORK FOR PRICE AGREEMENT

Several Counties, Including Hardin, Have Already Reached Settlement.

As Marion county dairies and farmers producing milk for sale here continued to work toward an agreement on milk prices for this county, the Ohio Milk Marketing commission yesterday approved agreements for Hardin and other counties, an Associated Press dispatch from Columbus states.

The Hardin county quotations approved by the commission include retail prices of nine cents a quart and five cents a pint for milk. Wholesale prices are seven and one-half cents a quart, four cents a pint. The commission approved a flat price of $1.50 a hundred pounds for dairies to pay dairy farmers for all milk used including surplus.

Price agreements were approved also for Stark and Licking counties.

47 CLAIMS FILED IN ACCIDENT CASES

Forty-seven claims, the most serious of them involving only loss of time, were filed by Marion county workers with the state industrial commission in September according to a report today by Thomas P. Kearns, superintendent of the division of safety and hygiene.

The total time loss reported for the county was 374 days, accounted for in 14 cases of more than seven days loss each and nine with seven days or less. Twenty-four of the claims were medical cases involving no time loss.

NEW U. S. POLICY STARTS GOLD FEVER EPIDEMIC

With Uncle Sam in the market for gold the hunt for the precious metal in many hitherto abandoned diggings of the country is on with renewed fervor. Here is a scene near Denver, Colo., where hundreds of men, women and children are panning for the precious metal proving that the gold fever of '49 has not abated a bit. The present price of mined gold is more than $10 above the old statute price.

NRA READY TO WAR ON BIG VIOLATORS

...tion of the code over to the attorney general.

Ford May Comply

Submission of employment statistics to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce the motor code authority was likely to afford a clear cut Ford test. NRA was seeking to determine immediately what manufacturers plan to supply figures. There were intimations the Ford Motor Co. although not a member would comply.

As for the case of a Ford dealer in a forestry conservation corps contract, Johnson said:

"I have taken the position that a great big billion dollar manufacturer can not hide behind a $10,000 company."

"Johnson is not boycotting us," The Ford Motor Co. retorted. "He is boycotting 5,300 American manufacturers who cooperate with Johnson. Not only has Johnson attempted a grave injustice upon a law-abiding American industry, he also has assumed to talk like a dictator and the supreme court combined."

The company said the forest conservation bid was submitted by a dealer, not by the company. It said rejection of the bid will charge $200,000 to the taxpayer and charged Johnson with attempting a grave injustice upon a law-abiding American industry.

The statement referred to 5,300 industries whose products Ford uses.

Mark-up Opposed

As the Ford controversy reached a new peak, farm administration officials decided to scrap some of the major provisions of NRA's retail code in drafting the companion charter for the food and grocery end of the industry. This reopened old differences between the two recovery agencies and put a final decision up to President Roosevelt.

Farm officials opposed the minimum mark up plan on retail prices and now are equally opposed to the retail provision that selling prices "should include an allowance for actual wages of store labor, to be fixed and published from time to time by the trade authority."

This was the chief provision to which farm officials objected in the new retail code. They do not want to go beyond authorizing a prohibition against sales below invoice costs.

Until the codes are harmonized, a merchant selling both dry goods and food would find himself operating under two sharply divergent price schemes.

SCOUTS WILL HONOR MEMORY OF HARDING

Karl Bechtle of Troop 5 have been named to perform this honor.

Harding area scout officials inaugurated the scout pilgrimage last year and were rewarded by a generous turnout of the public and by an impressive ceremony. Continuation of the pilgrimage this year is part of the program to make it a permanent event and one that will take its place as an annual part of Marion's civic life. A group of citizens are working with scout officials in mapping out this year's program.

Territory comprising the Harding Boy Scout area is Marion, Crawford, Morrow and Wyandot counties.

RAIDING PARTIES DESCEND ON PLANTS

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, Oct. 28. Rolling parties that chose the hour when shifts would be changing descended early today on three manufacturing plants where strikes are in progress among tool and die makers overturning automobiles of workmen, and breaking some of windows in one of the factories.

The most serious damage was done at the Federal Engineering works, where rocks and timbers were thrown through the windows, the timbers tearing out sashes as well as glass. Three automobiles

SILENCE BROKEN BY LITVINOFF IN BERLIN

...say anything I want to pass my journalistic friends the disappointment of incurring expense for nothing.

"Of course if some one happens to be on the same boat, I can not help it, but I don't want to be the party to lead him into certain disappointment."

To a barrage of questions as to the problems to be discussed with President Roosevelt and the effect of recognition upon Russia's economic relations to other nations, Litvinoff said:

"As far as I am concerned everything could be settled in a half hour."

Then, with a smile he added:

"You newspapermen always want to anticipate future events. We diplomats are afraid of knowing a future we don't want to know.

"Why anticipate?"

After a pause, he summed up the effect of recognition, however, by saying that every new relation ship established between two nations must to some degree affect the relations of all other countries."

Declines Positive Statement

To a specific question as to whether, for example, there would be a new distribution of Russian orders for goods, Litvinoff said that is something to be decided later.

Litvinoff denied reports that the choice of the first Russian ambassador to the United States already had been made, saying, all speculation concerning that in the press has been wrong."

Of Senator William G. McAdoo's recent visit to Russia, he insisted "Mr. McAdoo visited me in a purely personal capacity."

Litvinoff expressed the opinion that one week in America ought to be enough to accomplish his mission.

Finding it impossible to elicit anything further from him concerning America, the correspondents then posed questions regarding Russo-German relations.

"I am to see Von Neurath (German foreign minister today," Litvinoff said. "I always see him when passing through Germany."

PENNY SUPPER TO BE HELD MONDAY

Plans for a penny supper Monday night, open to the public, were made at a regular meeting of Lime City Council No. 208, Order of United American Mechanics, in Junior Order hall last night.

The supper will begin at 5 p. m. and will be followed by dancing and card playing.

Arrangements were made for annual memorial services to be conducted at the Forest Lawn Presbyterian church Nov. 12.

One application for membership was received. Work was conferred on one candidate, following a short business session.

Wooster-Muskie Battle Headlines Ohio Grid Program

SPOTLIGHT ALSO ON RESERVE'S CONFLICT WITH BEREA ELEVEN

Greater Cleveland Crown at Stake; Ohio Takes On Northwestern.

By The Associated Press

Ohio State's tilt with Northwestern in a homecoming for the Ohio conference battle between Wooster and Muskingum and the duel for supremacy in the greater Cleveland loop between Baldwin-Wallace and Western Reserve headline today's Ohio gridiron program.

Wooster, unbeaten, untied and unscored and holding the best record in the state on that basis, has had only one touchdown scored against it in four games. Muskingum, victor over Kent, Mt. Union and Heidelberg, was held to a scoreless tie by Otterbein.

Title at Stake

In the point system which decides the greater Cleveland title, Baldwin-Wallace would have a substantial hold on the crown with a victory over Reserve's Red Cats.

One Ohio conference game fought last night resulted in a scoreless tie between Dayton and John Carroll.

Today's Ohio conference menu, besides the important Wooster-Muskingum meeting, includes Oberlin at Case, Mt. Union at Heidelberg, Bowling Green at Toledo, Kent at Hiram, Ashland at Akron and Otterbein at Ohio Northern.

The lone Buckeye A. A. battle is between Wittenberg and Miami at Oxford.

The rest of the program on Ohio fields includes John Marshall at Findlay; Centre's visit to Xavier; Ohio Wesleyan at Denison; Transylvania at Ohio U.; Earlham at Bluffton and Rio Grande and Anderson at Middleport. Butler clashes with the University of Cincinnati tonight on the latter's field.

Marietta on Road

Out of the state, Marietta plays Allegheny at Meadville, Pa.; Kenyon meets Rochester at Rochester, N. Y.; Defiance visits Orchard at Lake St. Marys, Mich.; and Wilberforce plays Langston at Langston, Okla.

The deadlock between Dayton's Flyers and John Carroll at Cleveland last night was featured by the first-half attack of the visitors and the march to the 16-yard line made by John Carroll in the second half.

John Carroll made eight first downs to five for Dayton, the Flyers getting four of their first downs in the opening half.

HARDING, MANSFIELD RESUME GRID SCRAP

Tygers Favored But Presidents Hope To Put Up Stiff Battle.

Mansfield High school's unbeaten football band invaded Fairground field this afternoon for the annual renewal of grid relations with the Harding Presidents. The Tygers were heavy favorites to add the Presidents to their list of victims despite the fact the Marion eleven has always been somewhat of a jinx to Murphy coached combinations.

Mansfield will be seeking to play its thirty-eighth game without a loss, not having been beaten since 1928. Several ties, two of them by Harding, mar the Tygers' record book.

Harding goes into the game pretty badly crippled up but hopes to have some of the injured regulars ready to play at least part of the game. Mansfield has reported no injuries to the starting lineup.

The game is scheduled to commence at 2:30.

While Harding is playing Mansfield, Ashland and Galion will be meeting in another N. C. O. league game at Ashland. Bucyrus and Shelby are scheduled to meet at Bucyrus in a non-league fracas.

Amateurs To Play.

The Marion amateur football team will play the West Side A. C. Sunday afternoon at Fairground field. The Amateurs are made up of former Harding and St. Mary students. The lineup includes: Jack Johnson, le.; Jack Linz, lt; Ron Clark, lg.; Eric Williams c; Bill Jevas rg; Lowell Firstenberger lt; John Jenner le; Pete Howison qb; Red Keller rh; Don Greenland lh and Carol Caris fb.

Although born in Belfast, Ireland, Dec. 19, 1907, McLarnin called Vancouver, B. C., his home in recent years and did most of his fighting in the United States. Foster was a native of England.

RETURN DUEL ON RACE CARD TODAY

By The Associated Press

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 28 — A return duel between the two-year-olds Mata Hari and Discovery was on the program today as 11 horses were to start in the $10,000 added Kentucky jockey club stakes.

Mata Hari, a Dixiana stable entry, won the $5,000 added Breeders' futurity here last Saturday, although rated no better than third, while Discovery, owned by Adolphe Pons and rated second best, finished third.

Besides the Dixiana filly, those believed to have a chance include Hadagal, Dan Sabath, Sabited and Collateral.

Brothers Share Honors on Three Southern Teams

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Taking a cue from the "sister" teams of the vaudeville circuits, perhaps, southern football squads are featuring a number of "brother" acts this season, and they are getting the headlines.

The Wilcox family of Tyler, Texas, has a sort of monopoly on the guarding business at Georgia Tech. Dave Wilcox, a junior, plays left guard and close beside him at right guard is Brother John, a sophomore. Dave's twin, Leland, also a guard, did not return to school this year and thereby intra-family rivalry was averted.

Not to be outdone, Duke university has Brothers Jack and E. B. Dunlap playing guard and center, respectively. Years of playing side by side in high school and college have produced near perfection in team work.

Howard college at Birmingham, Ala., goes a little further with a "Twin Brother" headliner, the only one known to be playing the southern circuits. Brother Dave Snell plays halfback and his twin, Dan, is an end. They are equally accurate with their toes. If it doesn't suit Dave to punt, Dan drops back from the line and does the job.

ELI LEADER

Since Bob Lassiter was a youngster, his ambition has been to lead a Yale football team to victory over Harvard. He is having his opportunity this season for the 21 year old Charlotte, N. C., youth is captain of the Eli squad. He is a back, stands 5 feet, and weighs 170. (International News Photo)

THREE TEAMS SET TO STOP MICHIGAN

Hawks, Wildcats and Gophers Still in Race for Big Ten Title

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO. The Big Ten's [illegible] most perennial problem play, "who's going to stop Michigan?" now seems to be set for a run deep into November.

As the conference race nears mid-season the possibility appears that football big league of the midlands once again may have to depend on Minnesota, in that traditional late November battle, to check the mighty Wolverines.

But this isn't the answer, or even a thorough guess yet. Two other Michigan foes, the amazing Iowa eleven and a Northwestern team apparently recovered from early-season jitters, have their own ideas about a solution.

Not to belittle the Gophers' fitness for the assignment—for they always have been the most stubborn of Wolverine foes—yet they have been able only to "come close" in each of the last four seasons. In three of these Michigan has tied for or won outright the title.

Say It With Touchdowns

Michigan's disposal of Ohio State in unexpectedly convincing 13-0 fashion left many fans almost willing to concede Harry Kipke's seasoned squad another championship.

But that was just the first test on Michigan's six-game Big Ten slate, and three of its five remaining foes picked the same day to "say it with touchdowns."

Iowa, Minnesota and Northwestern in that order Michigan's last three obstacles—are irreconcilables to a Wolverine walk-over. Chicago and Illinois, next two opponents of the Kipkemen, have faded as potential Wolverine-trappers.

Ossie Solem's Hawkeyes, well on the way to doing one of the best jobs of "avenging" the midlands have seen, are far from convinced that they will be stopped.

Gophers Gather Speed

Overwhelmed, 44 to 6, by Northwestern in the 1932 finale, Iowa opened the season against the Purple this fall and promptly reversed that one, 7-0. Their next-to-worst defeat was at the hands of Wisconsin 34-0 and now they have wiped that out by a 26-7 larruping.

Sophomore backs Dick Grayne and Russ Fisher, senior quarterback Joe Laws and veteran tackle Zud Schammel, head the Hawkeye comeback.

As for Minnesota, that "November team" that Coach Bernie Bierman cautiously forecast weeks ago, apparently has begun to ripen. Like Iowa and Northwestern, it is liberally sprinkled with sophomore talent which has power to burn.

The Gopher powerhouse seems to be gaining control, surely if slowly.

It was tied by Indiana, then tied again by a higher-rated Purdue machine, then bashed over a 7-3 conquest of Pittsburgh, a considerable achievement. Sophomores Julius Alfonse and Sheldon Beise in the backfield with veteran "Pug" Lund have been sparkling the juggernaut attack.

Northwestern, after going scoreless for 10 quarters, finally found touchdown street against Indiana's big team and wrecked the Hoosiers, 25-0, far more than Minnesota or Notre Dame did to the Cream and Crimson.

"Eggs" Manske, end, and Ollie Olsen fullback, are Purple veterans who may lend their team to late-season heights, braced by a few sophomores of whom center Chuck Hinck is outstanding.

AL GATCHELL KO'S FOSTORIA FIGHTER

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, Oct. 28—With nearly 800 fight fans present, Al Gatchell, local heavyweight fighter, scored a knockout victory over Jim Carter of Fostoria, in the sixth round of a scheduled 10 round fight Thursday at the BeBeth garage. Toughy Miller, of here, won a decision over Dickie Wallace of Fostoria, in a four rounder. In the three-round curtain raiser, K. O. Lee defeated Kid Kraus. Lee Reich of Kenton, knocked out K. O. Hart of Wharton, in the first round of the first preliminary. Kid Mondale of Marion, scored a technical K. O. over Kid Reese, in the sixth round of their scheduled eight round bout.

The Italian government has required that alcohol shall be mixed with gasoline for use in motor vehicles at a rate of 20 per cent by volume to consume one-fourth of the domestic production of the latter.

Critics agree the Western conference this season is loaded up with more powerful elevens than any section of the country. Youthful Harry Kipke's great Michigan machine still thunders along in front, but in Minnesota, Northwestern and Iowa the Wolverines still face three formidable hurdles in their path to another title. Above are four stellar performers in the Big Ten's battle royal.

Solem Popularity Soars as Iowa Stages Comeback

By International News Service

CHICAGO Oct 28 — Oscar Martin (Ossie to the boys) Solem could be mayor of Iowa City tomorrow. He would just as soon be coach of Iowa's miracle football team. At the moment, he is doing well enough at that.

Not so many years ago the Big Ten faculty board, casting about for the answer to Iowa's superiority on the gridiron, found that some of the boys who were willing to perish for the alma mater were doing it, but not without caviar at tea and the style and elegance to which amateurs should not be accustomed. The boys were forthwith sent back to the selling of bonds and Iowa moved into a football decline that required nothing short of a miracle man for its savior.

That man is Ossie Solem, quiet-spoken, genial gentleman, who learned to play football at Minnesota with Clark Shaughnessy and Bernie Bierman and learned how to coach at Drake. Burt Ingwerson made a valiant attempt to resuscitate the Hawks but gave up the job in disgust following the 1931 season.

The late Knute Rockne was once moved to [illegible] Solem, then coach at Drake, is the author of the most intricate and effective offense his teams had ever encountered. That he was right in his observations may now be attested by Dick Hanley of Northwestern, to say nothing of Doc Spears of Wisconsin.

Northwestern, which subsequently stopped Stanford and then beat Indiana, 25 to 0, was unable to score on the Hawks. Instead the Wildcats went down to an amazing 7 to 0 defeat. Wisconsin was duck-soup for Iowa last Saturday, the Badgers losing, 20 to 7. It took Iowa just 10 minutes to make two touchdowns in the [illegible].

Any statement that Iowa then the doormat of the Big Ten, four weeks ago would be a contender for championship would have caused a snicker. Today, [illegible]. Just now the Big Ten [illegible] attention to the Iowa-Michigan game at Minneapolis Oct. 28. The following Saturday's [illegible] appraisal of this [illegible] wrong, the conference will be giving its attention to the Iowa-Michigan game.

Not the least of Solem's [illegible] this year is Dick Crayne, [illegible] field man who tucks a football under his arm much after the fashion of the one-time dreaded "Red" Grange and travels much in the same manner. Against Northwestern, on one occasion, he traveled 70 yards for a touchdown and on another he went 15 yards for what was a very discouraging incident to the Wildcats.

Solem is not the rah-rah type of coach. He gets results by careful planning and convincing language. That he gets results is the pay-off.

NOTRE DAME TO TRY SOPH QUARTERBACK

Mazziotti Will Get Chance To Add Punch To Offense.

By The Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 28—Hoping that Tony Mazziotti will prove to be the "spark plug" the team needs, Coach Heartley "Hunk" Anderson sends his revamped Notre Dame eleven against the powerful Pittsburgh Panthers here today. A crowd of 40,000 was expected.

Long before the season started hundreds of words were written about what Mazziotti, a sophomore, was going to do for Notre Dame. He had clinched the quarterback job before training had begun. But Tony hasn't played a game so far because of injuries.

GRID GIANTS MOVING TOWARD CLIMACTIC BATTLES OF SEASON

Brilliant Program of Sectional and Intersectional Games On Today.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 — Marching steadily toward the climactic battles of November, the Giants of college football bade farewell to October today in a series of glamorous sectional and intersectional contests.

The program was dominated by such spectacles as those pitting Southern California against California, Yale against Army, Fordham against Alabama, Minnesota against Iowa, Pitt against Notre Dame, Penn against Navy, and Ohio State against Northwestern.

At Berkeley, California's Golden Bears hoped to hang up its first victory since 1929 over Southern California but the Trojans were favored despite their scoreless tie with Oregon State a week ago. Yale and Army were prepared for a stubborn duel between undefeated elevens at New Haven.

Fordham vs. Alabama

The Fordham-Alabama intersectional test at New York brought together another pair of undefeated elevens in what looked like the closest sort of a match. The Big Ten hopes of Iowa and Minnesota hung in the balance at Minneapolis while the past history of the sensational rivalries of Pitt and Notre Dame on the one hand and Penn and Navy on the other conspired to shadow the fact that all four previously had been beaten.

Sharing the intersectional stage were the meetings between Michigan State and Syracuse at East Lansing, of Princeton's undefeated Tigers and Washington & Lee at Princeton; of Georgia and New York University at Athens, Ga.

Fighting Iowa and Minnesota for the Big Ten headlines were Michigan's mighty Wolverines, facing Chicago; Purdue's unbeaten Boilermakers, who clashed with Wisconsin; and Northwestern and Ohio State, battling at Columbus to get back into the conference race.

Big Six Teams Busy

The Big Six, playing strictly among themselves, paired off Nebraska's champion Cornhuskers against Oklahoma; Kansas against Kansas State and Iowa State against Missouri with only the last two apparently out of the championship race.

In the eastern sector, Harvard and Dartmouth, Holy Cross and Brown, Carnegie Tech and Washington & Jefferson, Columbia and Penn State, Colgate and Lafayette, Bucknell and Temple, Manhattan and Villanova, and Maryland and Western Maryland completed the array of big-time games.

Tulane and Auburn, Tennessee and Florida, Louisiana State and Vanderbilt, all were paired in the Southeastern conference while the rival southern group countered with Virginia Poly and South Carolina, and Virginia and Virginia Military.

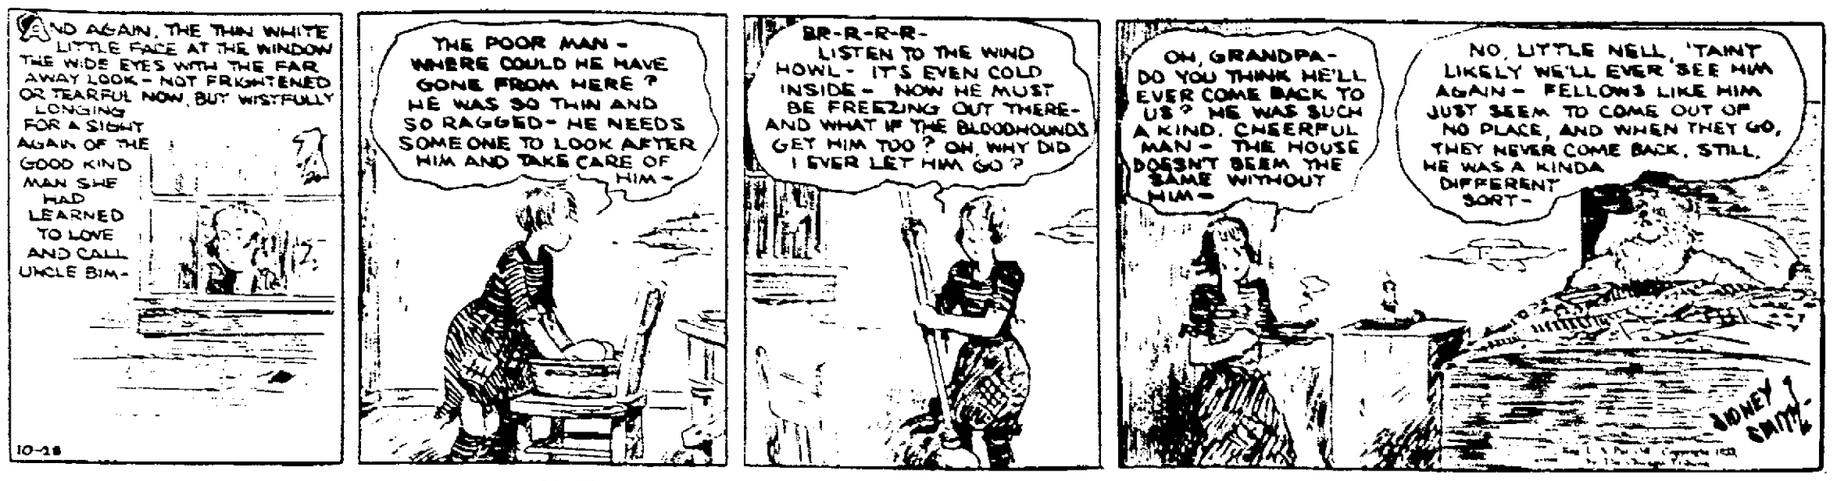
THE GUMPS

BY SIDNEY SMITH



AND AGAIN, THE THIN WHITE LITTLE FACE AT THE WINDOW THE WIDE EYES WITH THE FAR AWAY LOOK - NOT FRIGHTENED OR TEARFUL NOW, BUT WISTFULLY LONGING FOR A SIGHT AGAIN OF THE GOOD KIND MAN SHE HAD LEARNED TO LOVE AND CALL UNCLE BIM-10-28
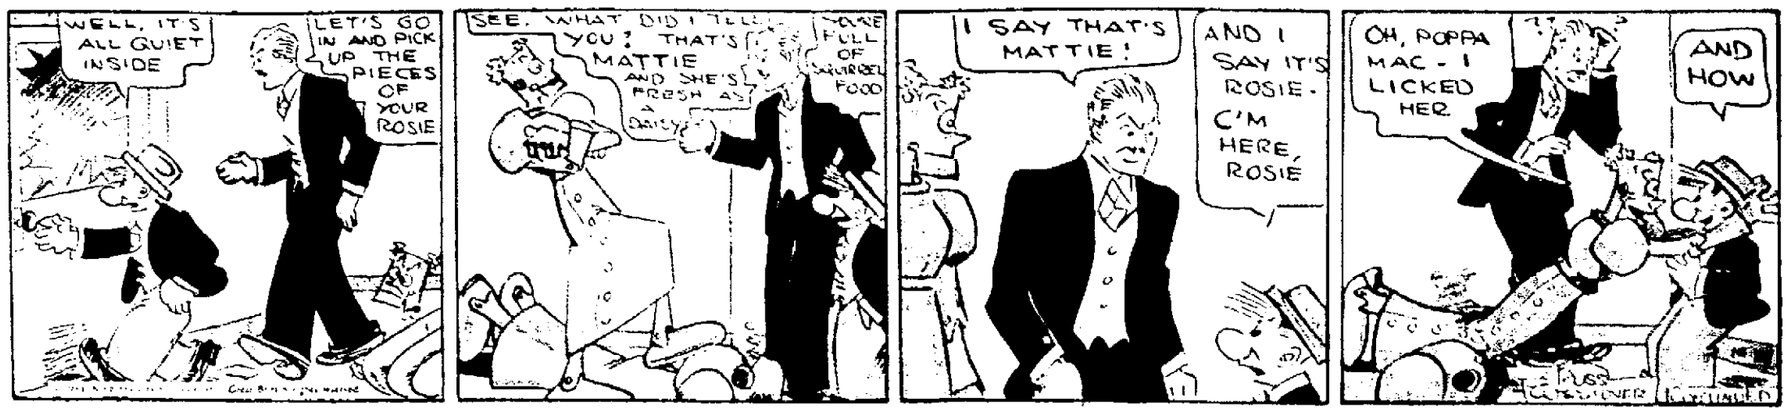
THE POOR MAN - WHERE COULD HE HAVE GONE FROM HERE ? HE WAS SO THIN AND SO RAGGED - HE NEEDS SOMEONE TO LOOK AFTER HIM AND TAKE CARE OF HIM -
BR-R-R-R- LISTEN TO THE WIND HOWL - IT'S EVEN COLD INSIDE - NOW HE MUST BE FREEZING OUT THERE - AND WHAT IF THE BLOODHOUNDS GET HIM TOO ? OH, WHY DID I EVER LET HIM GO ?
OH, GRANDPA - DO YOU THINK HE'LL EVER COME BACK TO US ? HE WAS SUCH A KIND, CHEERFUL MAN - THE HOUSE DOESN'T SEEM THE SAME WITHOUT HIM -
NO, LITTLE NELL, 'TAINT LIKELY WE'LL EVER SEE HIM AGAIN - FELLOWS LIKE HIM JUST SEEM TO COME OUT OF NO PLACE, AND WHEN THEY GO, THEY NEVER COME BACK. STILL, HE WAS A KINDA DIFFERENT SORT -
SIDNEY SMITH

TILLIE THE TOILER

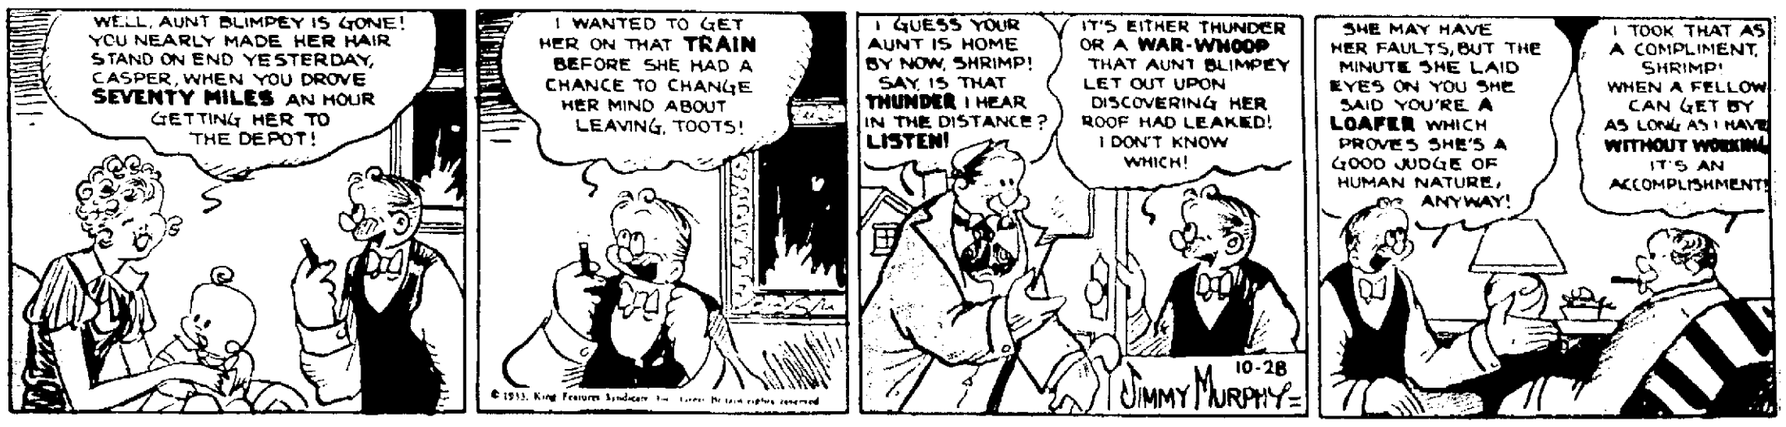
BY RUSS WESTOVER



WELL, IT'S ALL QUIET INSIDE
LET'S GO IN AND PICK UP THE PIECES OF YOUR ROSIE
SEE, WHAT DID I TELL YOU ? THAT'S MATTIE AND SHE'S FRESH AS A DAISY
YOU'RE FULL OF SQUIRREL FOOD
I SAY THAT'S MATTIE !
AND I SAY IT'S ROSIE - C'M HERE, ROSIE
OH, POPPA MAC - I LICKED HER
AND HOW
RUSS WESTOVER

TOOTS AND CASPER

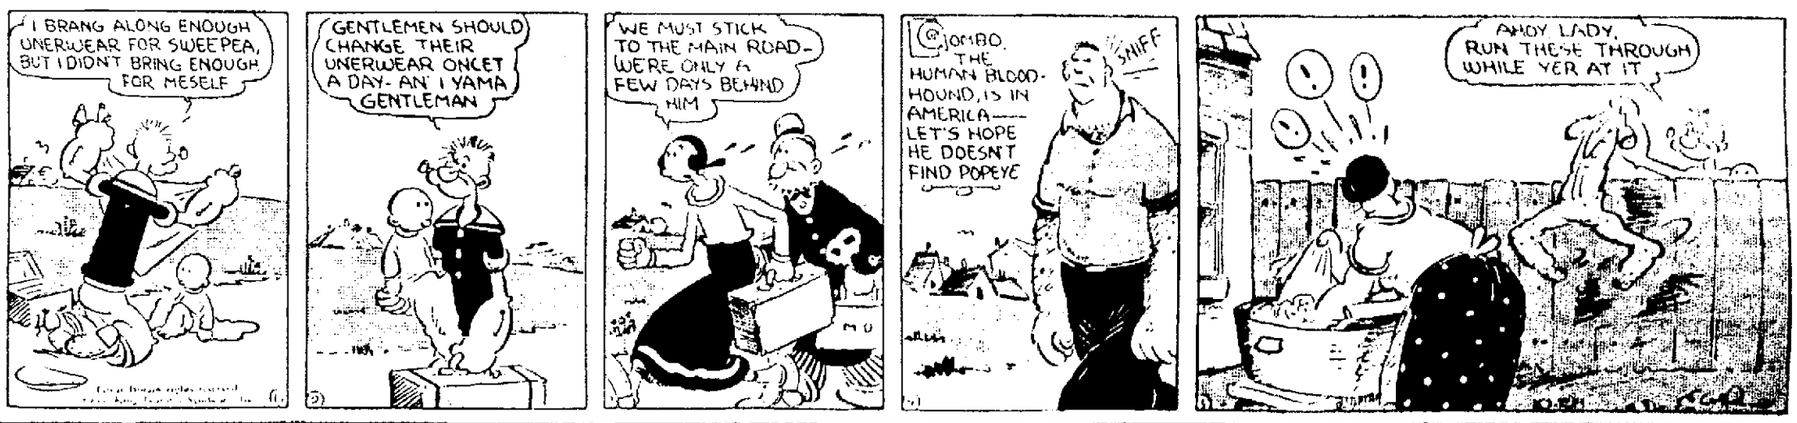
BY JIMMY MURPHY



WELL, AUNT BLIMPEY IS GONE! YOU NEARLY MADE HER HAIR STAND ON END YESTERDAY, CASPER, WHEN YOU DROVE SEVENTY MILES AN HOUR GETTING HER TO THE DEPOT!
I WANTED TO GET HER ON THAT TRAIN BEFORE SHE HAD A CHANCE TO CHANGE HER MIND ABOUT LEAVING, TOOTS!
© 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.
I GUESS YOUR AUNT IS HOME BY NOW, SHRIMP! SAY, IS THAT THUNDER I HEAR IN THE DISTANCE ? LISTEN!
IT'S EITHER THUNDER OR A WAR-WHOOP THAT AUNT BLIMPEY LET OUT UPON DISCOVERING HER ROOF HAD LEAKED! I DON'T KNOW WHICH!
10-28
JIMMY MURPHY
SHE MAY HAVE HER FAULTS, BUT THE MINUTE SHE LAID EYES ON YOU SHE SAID YOU'RE A LOAFER WHICH PROVES SHE'S A GOOD JUDGE OF HUMAN NATURE, ANYWAY!
I TOOK THAT AS A COMPLIMENT, SHRIMP! WHEN A FELLOW CAN GET BY AS LONG AS I HAVE WITHOUT WORKING, IT'S AN ACCOMPLISHMENT!

THIMBLE THEATER

BY SEGAR



I BRANG ALONG ENOUGH UNERWEAR FOR SWEEPEA, BUT I DIDN'T BRING ENOUGH FOR MESELF
GENTLEMEN SHOULD CHANGE THEIR UNERWEAR ONCET A DAY - AN' I YAMA GENTLEMAN
WE MUST STICK TO THE MAIN ROAD - WE'RE ONLY A FEW DAYS BEHIND HIM
COMBO, THE HUMAN BLOOD-HOUND, IS IN AMERICA — LET'S HOPE HE DOESN'T FIND POPEYE

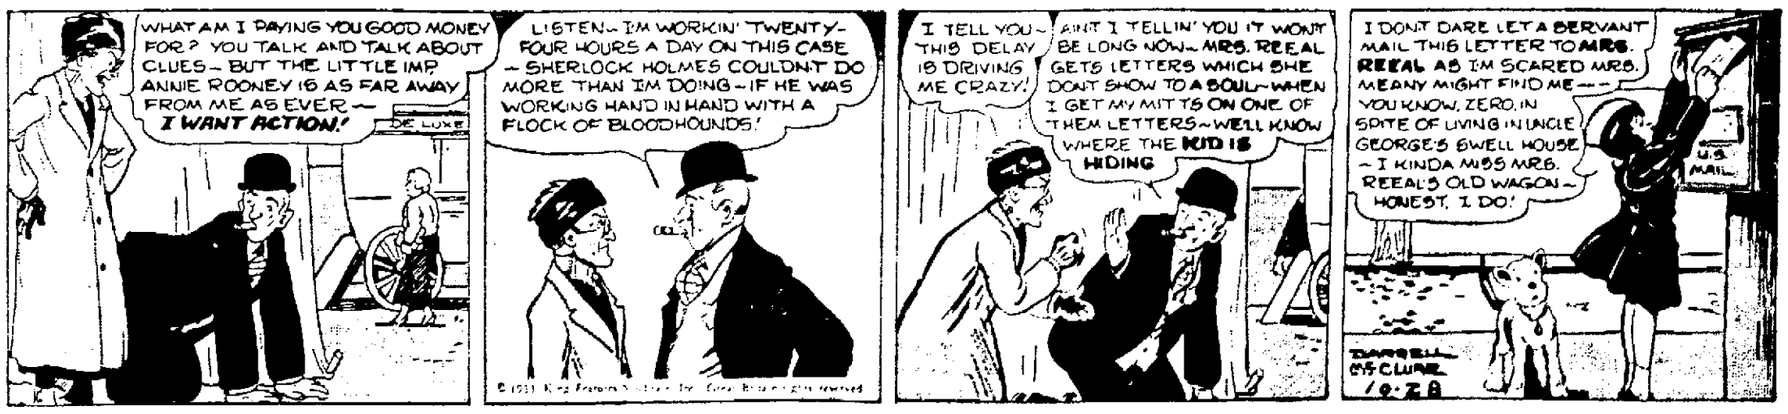
ANDY LADY, RUN THESE THROUGH WHILE YER AT IT

ANNIE ROONEY

BY DARREL McCLURE



WHAT AM I PAYING YOU GOOD MONEY FOR ? YOU TALK AND TALK ABOUT CLUES - BUT THE LITTLE IMP ANNIE ROONEY IS AS FAR AWAY FROM ME AS EVER — I WANT ACTION!
DE LUXE
LISTEN - I'M WORKIN' TWENTY-FOUR HOURS A DAY ON THIS CASE - SHERLOCK HOLMES COULDN'T DO MORE THAN I'M DOING - IF HE WAS WORKING HAND IN HAND WITH A FLOCK OF BLOODHOUNDS!
I TELL YOU - THIS DELAY IS DRIVING ME CRAZY!
AIN'T I TELLIN' YOU IT WON'T BE LONG NOW - MRS. REEAL GETS LETTERS WHICH SHE DON'T SHOW TO A SOUL - WHEN I GET MY MITTS ON ONE OF THEM LETTERS - WELL KNOW WHERE THE KID IS HIDING
I DON'T DARE LET A SERVANT MAIL THIS LETTER TO MRS. REEAL AS I'M SCARED MRS. MEANY MIGHT FIND ME — YOU KNOW, ZERO, IN SPITE OF LIVING IN UNCLE GEORGE'S SWELL HOUSE - I KINDA MISS MRS. REEAL'S OLD WAGON - HONEST, I DO!

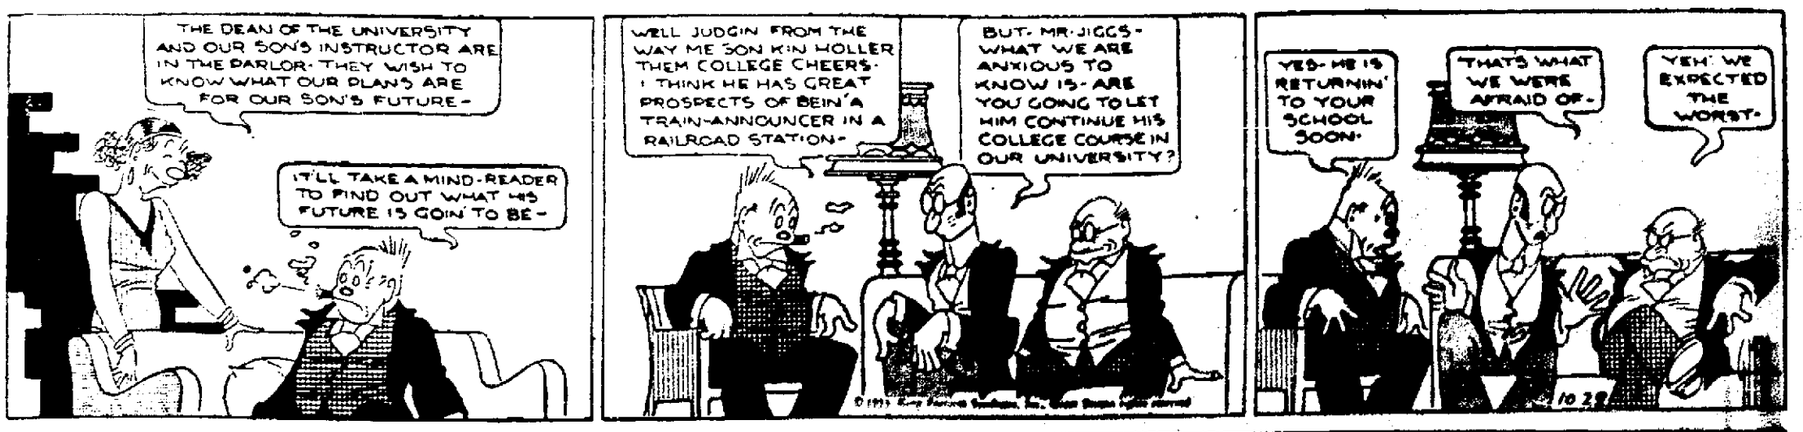
BRINGING UP FATHER

BY GEORGE McMANUS



THE DEAN OF THE UNIVERSITY AND OUR SON'S INSTRUCTOR ARE IN THE PARLOR - THEY WISH TO KNOW WHAT OUR PLANS ARE FOR OUR SON'S FUTURE -
IT'LL TAKE A MIND-READER TO FIND OUT WHAT HIS FUTURE IS GOIN' TO BE -
WELL JUDGIN FROM THE WAY ME SON KIN HOLLER THEM COLLEGE CHEERS - I THINK HE HAS GREAT PROSPECTS OF BEIN' A TRAIN-ANNOUNCER IN A RAILROAD STATION -
BUT - MR. JIGGS - WHAT WE ARE ANXIOUS TO KNOW IS - ARE YOU GOING TO LET HIM CONTINUE HIS COLLEGE COURSE IN OUR UNIVERSITY ?
YES - HE IS RETURNIN' TO YOUR SCHOOL SOON -
THAT'S WHAT WE WERE AFRAID OF -
YEH - WE EXPECTED THE WORST -

POLLY AND HER PALS

BY CLIFF STERRETT

JUST KIDS

BY AD CARTER

HEY — MR. BRANNER
HAVE YUH SEEN MUSH AN' FATSO ?
NO - I HAVEN'T - MY BOY
HAVE YUH SEEN MUSH AN FATSO? SAY, MRS. MUSH'S MOTHER IS AWFUL WORRIED!
NO - WE AIN'T SEEN 'EM
OH, DEAR ME BUT!
JOHN - I'M TERRIBLY WORRIED! OUR BOY WENT FISHING WITH FATSO AND THAT TERRIFIC STORM CAME UP AND NOBODY SEEMS TO HAVE SEEN THEM!
THERE - THERE - SARAH! THERE'S NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT! I TOLD HIM WHENEVER HE WENT OUT IN A BOAT TO BORN TO THE NEAREST SHORE AS SOON AS A STORM CAME UP! ME AND FATSO ARE PROBABLY ON SOME ISLAND IN THE SOUND AND NOW THAT THE STORM IS OVER THEY'LL SOON BE HOME - SO DON'T WORRY - DARLING!

A Neglected Cough May Lead to BRONCHITIS

We believe that BRONCHITIS ranks about second of the diseases of the Respiratory Organs that kill the most people—

Any cough that lasts over 72 hours is a dangerous warning—Don't let a cough become chronic. Remember—that our Lower's Prescription Cough Syrup once known at German Prescription is successfully used in Bronchitis—No doubt the greatest remedy in the United States for those unstopable coughs and persistent colds—Your druggist can supply you at 60c and $1.20 a bottle or at our store.

CUSTOMER SATISFACTION
OUR FIRST CONCERN

Our investment of thousands of dollars and years of endeavor in the automobile business can only be protected by that degree of fairness and good-will building in both new and used car sales that will insure our continued success
With this thought in mind it is our aim to sell each used car on such basis of sound value that the creation of a prospective new car buyer of that customer in the future is assured.

Files Answer in Suit

Russell Heft of Nevada, driver of one of three automobiles that figured in an accident near Norton on June 21, 1931, denies charges of negligence and asserts he was not at fault, in an answer filed in common pleas court in two damage suits in which he is named defendant. In a suit brought by Harry Novak of Columbus, driver of one of the three cars, he answers that Novak's alleged negligence and carelessness were responsible for the accident. A similar answer was filed in a suit brought by J. R. Smyth, a passenger in one of the automobiles. Heft is represented by the law firm of Mouser, Young, Mouser & Wiant.

Toledo Close

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Oct. 28—The increasing dullness of trade in the wool market during October has been broken only by a slightly more cheerful tone than has been apparent. Sales during the past week have been mostly very small and confined largely to territory wools. Prices realized on the few transactions closed were firm compared with the previous week's quotations. Buyers however, have again begun to take more interest in domestic wools being offered.

AGED WOMAN'S BODY DISCOVERED AT HOME

Miss Ann O'Brien of LaRue Believed Dead for Three Days.

Special to The Star

LARUE, Oct. 28—Belief that Miss Ann O'Brien, about 74, whose body was found this morning in her home here, died Tuesday or Wednesday was expressed today. Copies of the Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday issues of a newspaper were found on her porch by Mrs. Otto Terry, collector, when she made her weekly rounds this morning. Mrs. Terry called a neighbor woman and they entered the home. The body was found crumpled forward on a couch, with groceries in the lap, indicating that Miss O'Brien had died within a few minutes after a return from a shopping trip.

Coroner M. F. Axthelm was called to view the body, before it was removed to the Davis undertaking establishment.

Miss O'Brien was a resident of LaRue for many years. She was the daughter of the late Patrick and Catherine O'Brien, natives of Ireland. She leaves no close relatives. Funeral arrangements have not been completed. Burial will be made in the LaRue cemetery.
